LIFE OF THE SHEPHERD

IT IS NOT ALL ARCADY IN THE MILLS AND DOWNS.

In the Districts in England Where Sheep Are Kept the Farmer Has Given Up the Soil For a Bad Job and Very Little Can Grow—Snowstorms Are the Dread of the Guardian of the Flock.

Standing alone on the edge of the bleak, bare down, the shepherd's cottage, with its white-washed walls and smoking chimney, makes a conspicuous feature in the landscape. It is the only habitation within an area of half-a-dozen square miles of open country, and there is no building within sight of it except the long, low barn that lies in the hollow 100 feet below. The evidences of man's handiwork are, indeed, few and far between in these deserted parts. Away to north and south, and east and west, stretch the great rolling hills—bare and desolate to-day as they have been for centuries past, though here and there a clump of wind-trained trees or a patch of stunted gorse is struggling to maintain a precarious existence on the chalky soil. Only in the valleys, where the rainstorms of a thousand years have washed down what little soil they could gather from the hills, does the farmer now find it worth while to drive his plow, and one may see, says The Globe, the product of his labors in the little round stacks of corn and the long neat heaps of mangolds that are dotted about here and there. But the work of the fields is practically over for the time being.

What little arable land there is has already been sown with wheat or thrown up into furrows, which make a warm brown contrast to the cold grey-green of the downs, and until the spring, when the whistling plowboys will come this way again, the valleys will be as silent as the hills around. Only one man among the solitude of these unfettered acres is always busy, and he is the shepherd who lives in the lonely cottage. Week in, week out, winter and summer, autumn and spring, he dwells among these hills, tending his sheep, either on the hillside or in the dale. In the morning he drives them slowly out of the fold in the valley where they spend the night, on to the uplands where the short sweet herbage grows, and leaving them there to be guarded by his dog, comes back again to pitch a fresh fold against their return at nightfall. That finished, he fills up his time in slicing roots and chaffing hay down in the barn, and carries a sackful of each out to the troughs in the hurdled enclosure. His watchful eye keeps wandering to the flock of ewes upon the hill, and ever and again, when they become too scattered to his liking, he waves his hand to their four-footed keeper to round them up. The dog obeys instantly, and having done what is required of him, sinks down once more upon the velvet turf to doze with one eye open until his services are next required. A break in the monotony of the shepherd's day arrives at noon, when his dinner is brought down to him from the cottage on the hill.

Keep Your Hands Soft.

At this season of the year it is a problem to keep hands soft. Rexall Toilet Cream will prove a boon to house-keepers. It is not greasy, dries in quickly and leaves the skin soft and velvety. Sold in 25c. bottles at Wal-again. They become too much for his liking. He waves his hand to their four-footed keeper to round them up. The dog obeys instantly, and having done what is required of him sinks down once more upon the velvet turf to doze with one eye open until his services are next required. A break in the monotony of the shepherd's day arrives at noon, when his dinner is brought down to him from the cottage on the hill. Generally speaking, it is his daughter who comes with her father's midday meal, and the appearance of her white apron on the hillside is the signal for the shepherd to straighten his back from toil and don his big blue cloak.

Then he repairs to the hut by the corner of the fold, and seating himself on a bundle of sacks, stirs the coals of the tiny stove into a blaze. His meal does not take him long, and the girl waits while her father empties the steaming bowl. Then, taking the vessel from him, and bidding him be home in time for tea, the girl starts back again up the steep hillside, singing as she goes. The shepherd fills and lights his pipe, and shouldering his crook, sets off to join his flock. He spends an hour walking round about and in among the black-faced ewes, sometimes passing his crook round the leg of one to examine it, paring the ill-grown hoof of one and cutting off a piece of matted wool from another. Then, as the watery sun begins to cast long shadows from the hilltops, he begins to drive the sheep down into the valley, and has them all safely hurdled by the time that dusk creeps on. For some weeks to come the shepherd and his dog will share the full responsibility of the flock, but presently, as the days grow longer, extra help will be needed to make ready for the coming of the lambs. It is then that the real work of the year begins, and days will be spent in the thatching hurdles and building separate pens all round the big strawed enclosure by the barn. Soon afterwards the erstwhile peaceful and contented flock will be transformed into a noisy assemblage of anxious mothers and complaining offspring. All day long, from morning until night, the valley will be filled with a multitude of voices pitched in every key, and the shepherd, or one of his assistants, will need to be in constant attendance.

During this long and anxious period the shepherd never goes home to his family for more than an hour or two at a time. Most of his meals are taken at his hut, and all his nights are spent there for three months on end. His sleep he takes in snatches during the daytime, never trusting anyone but himself to look after the flock by night. It is a hard and trying time, and the shepherd confesses that he is always glad when the lambing season is over. But what the shepherd dreads most of all is a heavy and sudden fall of snow, especially in the night. When that happens it is a case of all hands to the rescue, and incessant toil is necessary to keep the snow from drifting into the pens. The shepherd's calling is by no means so easy as it sometimes seems when we fall in with him on a summer's day lying on the downs, with his flock grazing peacefully around him, and the air filled with the tinkling of sheep-bells and the humming of bees among the downland flowers.

Col. J. A. McGillivray, K. C., Toronto, past chief ranger of the I. O. F. and supreme secretary, Toronto, died, suddenly, at Guelph. He was a prominent Orangeman and Free Mason, and twenty years ago was mayor of Uxbridge. He sat in the Dominion house two terms for North Ontario.

PRESENTATION AT STELLA.

On Saturday evening last a surprise party, consisting of the members of the official quarterly board of the Methodist church, Stella, and their wives, and other families of the congregation, visited the parsonage and presented Rev. Dr. Porter and Mrs. Porter with a handsome and valuable mission style rocking chair. After a bountiful supper, provided by the visitors, had been served the following address was presented:

"We, the members and adherents of the Stella Methodist church, take this opportunity, on the forty-seventh anniversary of your wedding, to show our appreciation of your devotedness to the interests of the church and community. It is our heartfelt prayer that your may be spared many more happy and prosperous years of usefulness together in the service of the Lord. We ask you to accept this gift as an earnest of the high esteem in which you are held by the many with whom you come in contact." Signed on behalf of the congregation, S. L. Pringle (recording steward), R. P. Saunders, William Montgomery, H. Filson, S. K. Tugwell, stewards."

Kingston Catholics bade Archbishop Gauthier good-bye, and presented him with a purse of $2,000 in gold. The priests of the diocese presented his Grace with a gold cross.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

TARIFF BILL PASSES.

Notwithstanding desperate warnings from the high protectionists, and cries that Canada has bounced the United States in the negotiations, the House of Representatives at Washington, on Tuesday, by a vote of 221 to 92, passed the McCall bill giving effect to the recent reciprocity arrangement between the two countries. The matter will now rest with the Senate, where its path will be a more thorny one, and where a different principle in rules can prevent its passage before March 1, if the opposition is sufficiently numerous and determined. The final vote in the House, after a debate of but two days, was a demonstration of expeditious legislation in the face of all the obstruction that the exasperated protectionists could muster, in order that the bill might have any sort of chance in the Senate, however, the House could not hold it long, and the debate was consequently short and every speech to the point.

A semi-serious writer suggests some attention to the literary needs of men and women of 40 or after. Lists of best books, "libraries" and guides are constantly being offered to young readers, but no one takes the middle-aged by the hand to correct their tendencies. It is assumed that they are safe and sane, yet, we are told, the middle-aged have their own pitfalls and sins. The middle-aged are apt to pride themselves on their maturity and "settled convictions." They do not beware of their prejudices and notions; they become cockshure and narrow. A new idea, a new style, a departure, cannot hope for encouragement from them. Do they not need "re-education?"

There may be something in this half-humorous suggestion. But not a little is to be said on the other side. Youth may be responsive, generous, impressionable, but it is also addicted to extreme views and extreme positions. The enthusiastic youthful convert to this or that movement in art or letters will not admit that anything good is to be found outside of his "school" or movement. What nonsense the extreme Wagnerian—or the extreme anti-Wagnerian—used to talk! What follies have been committed by "the young" in France in the name of freedom and progress!

The middle aged, or many of them, have profited by experience. They know that "schools" have their ups and downs; that "dead" styles have a way of being resurrected; that the law of action and reaction works in art as it does in politics. They are apt to be tolerant, balanced, reasonable. They do not see why admiration of Arnold Bennett involves withering repolitics. They are apt to be tolerant and Beethoven precludes enjoyment—or the candid avowal of enjoyment—of honest and sincere modern music. They have learned to avoid dogmatism and exaggeration. They may not be explosive, but they are appreciative.

Berlin, Germany, has been trying for years to reach the full stature of a capital, a weltstadt. The emperor himself has been active in trying to produce this result. He has encouraged foreign ambassadors to become spenders and has strongly encouraged the modern type of cosmopolitan hotel. But there is one thing he will not and cannot do. That is, to wear Berlin-made clothes. He gets his things from London. The nobility are following his example, and the Berlin tailors are protesting against this outbreak of anglomania.

A city which strives to be a weltstadt should be better able to clothe

NOTHING SHALL BREAK US

Let Us Set Down in Our Books That We Are Absolutely Unconquerable

"The Gospel of Something Else," as we may term it, is amazingly practical and fruitful in immediate, definite results. There is always something else. The one distressing thing that threatens us may be dodged, not always literally, but always spiritually. We can get a man's body into a corner, but the mind cannot be cornered.

The most effectual resources are those within the soul. The great soul is the one with unconquerable resources. The thing that strikes us in Socrates is that Athenian spite, prison, and hemlock somehow do not touch the man, he is smiling within himself superior to his enemies all the time. The Bhagavad Gita speaks of those "inner treasures of the mind, in which the depending one is not moved by the severest pain." Amiel says, "Rentrer dans l'ordre, se soumettre, et faire ce qu'on peut." (Get step with the universe and do what you can.) We hear no shrieks and panic fears from Gen. Wolfe as he dies before Quebec; as they assure him that the enemy flees he cries,

"THEN I DIE HAPPY."

The moral grandeur appears in this connection. Truly, he has "meat to eat that his disciples know not of." He sets this small life over against eternity: "Rejoice when men persecute you, for great is your reward in heaven."

He escapes the harassment of the petty by refuge in the vast: "Take no thought what ye shall eat and drink: seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added to you." He even submerged death with the flood of his inward glory, for he "endured the cross, despising the shame, for the joy that was set before him."

How much more effective we should be, how much the steadier our hand, and accurate our judgment, if we would learn this secret! The most important thing in the world to me is the weather in my soul. Let it be sunshine there and calm day and the odor of hidden flowers and I can front anything. No matter how terrible the trial to come, I have half won already if I can meet it serenely. And no matter what prize and joy may be given me, I have half spoiled it if I take it with a

But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young eyed cherubim."

"While I have a heart no treachery nor coldness on the part of any one I love shall utterly cast me down, for there is true love somewhere, and for me, and if I find it not on this planet, still my world is wider and none can rob me of the hope of some day clasping again those

"I have loved long since and lost awhile."

Our little earth is clasped by the majestic sky, our small planet is surrounded by an innumerable company of worlds, my insignificant body is one of a billion similar bodies now extant, my whole self and all my concerns are as a drop of rain falling into the Atlantic.

I take refuge in the infinite. O mine enemy, you cannot find me! I have hidden in the infinite.—Dr. Frank Crane.

"FAIRY"

"Well, I do reckon that for out-and-out cheek a blue-jay can lick all creation."

The words were spoken to a bird of the species named, and, as though realizing this, the little creature paused, its head turned aside, one bright eye regarding the speaker. Apparently the scrutiny was satisfactory, for in a moment the bird was hopping again in close proximity to the man's spade. In truth, save for his humanity, there was nothing alarming in Stephen Deane; other bright eyes—more critical than a blue-jay's—had found the tall, clean-limbed young miner, with his sun-stained skin and frank gaze, good to look upon, and if his face had the gravity which comes of shouldering life's responsibilities too early, there was a twinkle in the grey eyes which showed that he looked on the rosy side of things as a rule. The twinkle was prominent now as he surveyed his present visitor.

"S'pose you've got your own affairs to attend to," he drawled, "but if you could spare time to go down there an' find out what's goin' on you'd be doin' me a real service."

He nodded as he spoke to where, nearly half a mile below in the gully, a miscellaneous collection of rough buildings indicated a settlement. That something unusual was "goin' on" was evident from the groups of hurrying figures, the shouts, and occasional reports of firearms.

"It's either fightin' or celebratin', and as I allow it's that last I reckon she's come," Steve continued. "I most wish I'd—"

He did not finish, for a stumble, followed by a picturesque ejaculation which sent the blue-jay fluttering into the bushes, made him turn hastily.

"Halloa, Josh!" he said slowly. "Managed to tear yourself away from the festivities at last, eh?"

Josh was a middle-aged man, but otherwise of generous proportions, with a round, red face, which—as he was often told—made one hot to look at it, mopped his streaming brow and replied with a nod. Steve regarded him quizzically.

"Why, you're blushing like a girl, Josh," he began, only to be swiftly interrupted.

"Steve, you're playin' me for an infant," Josh said severely. "That old joke of my complexion ain't worthy of you, an' you wouldn't take in a blind mule; but if you meant to intermate that no news is required, I'll take it that way."

He sat down on a pile of gravel and began to fill his pipe, ramming the tobacco home with extra care. His companion watched him with ill-disguised impatience—reticence was quite a new feature in Joshua Stebb. At length, when the pipe was fairly going, Steve could stand it no longer.

"Seen't that I've been slavin' up here all day with nothing better than a blue-jay for company, an' that you've been in the gay and giddy centre of frivolity," he said, with a wave towards the settlement below, "perhaps it ain't unreasonable to expect some news."

Lesson VIII. Elijah's Flight and Return, 1 Kings 18.41 to 19.21

Golden Text, Isa. 40.31.

Verse 41. The sound of abundance—The Greek Old Testament has here the suggestive words, "the sound of the feet of the pilgrim-storm." All the evidence the prophet had was the word of the Lord. "Show thyself to Ahab, and I will send rain." Faith was not difficult after the miraculous exhibition of Jehovah's power in the sending of fire and the blotting out of the heathenish priesthood. So Elijah urges the king to renew his exhausted vitality with food and drink, at his tent up on the slope of my life—A confession of conscious failure, on the part of a man thoroughly discouraged.

11-12. Jehovah passed by—He was present in the strong wind, and in the earthquake and the fire, as well as in the still small voice. But the more tumultuous elements did not speak to the soul of the prophet as did the calm following the storm. God manifests himself in the quiet providences of life as well as in its upheavals.

13. He wrapped his face in his mantle—The solemn silence of the mountains filled him with awe and even dread, and he felt impelled to an act of self-abasement. His condition smote him, and with reproachful iteration the question returned: What doest thou here, Elijah?

15, 16. A threefold mission: (1) To anoint Hazael king of Syria, which would mean the founding of a new dynasty; (2) to set up Jehu as king over Israel, thus abolishing the house of Omri; (3) to anoint as his own successor Elisha,

London. The nobility are following his example, and the Berlin tailors are protesting against this outbreak of anglomania.

A city which strives to be a welt-stadt should be better able to clothe its own people. Patriotism is not so strong in these cosmopolitan days that even the jingo will consent to be a jay or a dowdy. The trouble with Berlin can be only a matter for speculation. Has art nouveau, so rampant there, demoralized even the tailors and dressmakers? Or has the general failure of amenity in Berlin life, so often noticed of late both by natives and strangers, begun to affect the very clothes the people wear?

The good old fashions, the simple manners of our fathers are passing, passing. The habits which made them distinguished for simplicity, even in a democracy, are no longer good enough for their sons and daughters. Ceremony is now the rule, and instead of a knife, fork and spoon, a complex and effete society has loaded the dining table with a collection of tools which resembles a silversmith's window at holiday times. To add to this luxury a man has invented a "noiseless soup spoon." The bowl of the spoon is fitted with a fixed lid which covers half of it, the half nearest the user. A small slit allows the liquid to pass silently into the diner's mouth, thus eliminating the noise which has heretofore annoyed supersensitive ears. A certain philosopher has declared that it was one of his chief pleasures to go to places where he could hear the rich eat. It seems that even this is to be denied us.

At the Paris horse show recently a special jury of experts was appointed to determine authoritatively just how much a horse of a given weight should carry in the saddle. The jury brought in the following decision: A horse weighing no more than 825 pounds should not carry a greater weight than 157 pounds, provided the girth of the animal does not exceed 67 inches. A horse weighing 935 pounds or less, with a girth of 69 inches, should not carry more than 209 pounds, and a horse weighing 1,045 pounds, with a girth of 71 inches, should not carry more than 231 pounds.

EASY FOR MOTHER.

"Does your mother allow you to have two pieces of pie when you are at home, Willie?" asked his hostess.

"No, ma'am."

"Well, do you think she would like you to have two pieces here?"

"Oh, she wouldn't care," said Willie, confidently; "this isn't her pie."

Even the bachelor minister is a marrying man.

send rain. Faith was now exhibited after the miraculous exhibition of Jehovah's power in the sending of fire and the blotting out of the heathenish priesthood. So Elijah urges the king to renew his exhausted vitality with food and drink, at his tent up on the slope of the mountain, before the expected downfall should make a journey to Jezreel impracticable.

42. Elijah went up to the top of Carmel—The rugged haunter of the wilderness forgot his own need of refreshment in his eagerness to see the hand of Jehovah displayed still further. The attitude he assumed was one of earnest prayer.

43. His servant—Tradition says this was the widow of Zarephath's son whom he snatched from the jaws of death. The sea was of course the Mediterranean from which rain would naturally sweep in. Six times the lad went up to the point from which the great expanse of water was clearly visible, but each time saw nothing but what had appeared in the brassy sky for three weary years.

46. The hand of Jehovah was on Elijah—That is, he was filled with a divine impulse of capricious exultation, which carried him before the rapidly moving chariot of Ahab even to the gates of the city Jezreel, where the king maintained a palace. Here he halted, for he had no liking for cities and could easily find shelter in the neighboring Gilboa.

2. Jezebel—To her the events on Carmel meant more than they possibly could to her husband, for her devotion to the cult of her father, who had been a high priest of the Baal-worship in Tyre, amounted to fanaticism. She could not sit idly by and see her work of years obliterated. It was to be expected that she would send just such a message to the prime mover of the threatened revolution, pronouncing upon him a virtual sentence of death.

3. Beersheba—Though this was a town of Judah, about thirty miles south of Hebron, yet Elijah did not feel himself secure there, inasmuch as the king of Israel was in alliance with the king of Judah at this time. So he took himself, in characteristic fashion, to the wilderness (1).

4. Juniper-tree—More properly a species of the broom plant, which grows everywhere in the deserts of the Holy Land. It afforded a poor shelter, but sometimes the best that could be had.

5. Went in the strength of that food forty days—The journey to Horeb, being not over 180 miles, would require a much less time than that. The number forty, however, is often taken to symbolize a period of testing (compare the cases of Moses and Jesus), and here doubtless refers to the time of Elijah's seclusion.

9. What doest thou here, Elijah?—Dr. Farrar gives a vivid interpretation to this question by emphasizing the successive words: "What doest thou here?" "He was doing nothing. Was there no work to be done in Israel? Was he tamely to allow Jezebel to be the final mistress of the situation?" "What doest thou here?" "Is it not very significant of thy name, 'Jehovah he is my God?' Is he to be the God of but one fugitive?" "What doest thou here?" "This is the wilderness. There are no idolaters or murderers, or breakers of God's commandments here."

10. I only am left; and they seek

15, 16. A threefold mission: (1) To anoint Hazael king of Syria, which would mean the founding of a new dynasty; (2) to set up Jehu as king over Israel, thus abolishing the house of Omri; (3) to anoint as his own successor Elisha, son of Shaphat of Abelmeholah. The purpose of all this is partly explained in the next verse. Israel had not been wholly purged of its pollutions by the long famine. It would still be necessary in the divine plan for the swords of Jehu and Hazael to fall upon the Baal-worshipping kings of Israel, and for Elisha to carry the reformatory work still farther. There is no record of Elijah's fulfilling all of this mission, but it came to be fulfilled, in one way and another, through his successor.

19. He with the twelfth—Elisha was guiding but one yoke, the others being in charge of servants.

Cast his mantle upon him—"It meant the adoption of Elisha by Elijah to be his spiritual son; and it meant a distinct call to the prophetic office."

20 Let me kiss my father and my mother—An expression of the tenderness characteristic of the younger prophet, and not an act of hesitation. Elijah, in the words, Go back again, gives him full permission; disclaiming any other purpose in throwing upon him the mantle than simply to summon him to a high duty.

21. Took the oxen, and slew them—A kind of burning of the bridges behind him.

CORONATION ROBES.

Cottage Looms in Suffolk at Work on Royal Velvet.

In the ancient borough of Sudbury in Suffolk, London, the few remaining hand loom weavers are hard at work making the velvet for the coronation robes.

Among the number are the Misses Foakes, members of a family of weavers who in days past were makers of bunting for the royal navy. In their cottage, which was once visited by the Queen, are two hand looms on which are two lengths of beautiful velvet, one rich crimson in color and the other dark brown.

The weavers are seated when at their looms, their feet working pedals resembling those of an organ. There are two sets of threads, the visible one forming the back of the material, and the other the pile, each of these being delicately threaded through vertical threads known as the harness. The weaver passes the shuttle backward and forward, and each warp and weft is pressed home by a swinging wooden frame. A cutter which runs across the loom on a wire cuts the threads to make the pile.

The process of manufacture is slow and tedious. The time is occupied not so much in the weaving as in the cleaning. At each foot or so made the weaver uses a curious knife like a spokeshave and shaves the surface of the velvet to clean it. There are now not more than thirty hand loom weavers left in Sudbury; the Misses Foakes being among the number. The rows of weavers' cottages, now occupied by other artisans and general workers, show the extent of the industry fifty years ago.

The British Parliament was opened on Monday by the King.

up here all day with nothing better than a blue-jay for company, an' that you've been in the gay and giddy centre of frivolity," he said, with a wave towards the settlement below, "perhaps it ain't unreasonable to expect some news."

"That's so," responded Stebb stolidly. "Well, Pete Adams lost a cool five hundred to Funny Rogers, the gambler, Jacob's best mule slipped and broke her off fore-leg, an'—"

He paused as Steve turned away and kicked an unoffending lump of red clay into infinitesimal fragments. "These interesting items of social intelligence don't seem to fill the bill," he continued. "Was there anythin' special you were expectin' to hear?"

Steve whirled round and regarded his partner fiercely for a moment. Then his face relaxed as he said:—

"All right, Josh, that's one to you. Drop foolin' now; has Fairy come?"

"No," replied the other soberly enough. "But there's a young lady from Noo York who calls herself Miss Nora McQueen, and at times she minds me a bit of her."

"Aye, they've spoilt her, as I knew they would," Steve said bitterly. "When the old man was just Jerry McQueen, the saloon-keeper, we were good enough for her; but now she's the only daughter of Mr. McQueen, who owns the richest claims in Red Pine, and she ain't been allowed to forget it at this highfalutin' New York seminary. Did her ladyship condescend to remember ye, Josh?" he queried.

"She shook hands—" Josh began.

"Having gloves on, of course," sneered Steve, with a glance at his partner's none too cleanly digits.

"An' asked after you," continued the other, and as the sneer on Steve's face grew more pronounced, he added, "She was nice, ye know, but there was a difference."

Deane nodded in silence.

"Ye see, Steve," Stebb explained. "On my way down I reckoned I would say, 'Halloo, Fairy, ye're back again, are ye?' but somehow I found meself callin' her Miss McQueen before I knowed it. An' I wasn't the only one, either."

"Red Pine ain't noted for timidity," Steve said, meditatively, "an' once she was just 'Fairy' to every man in it."

He sat down on an upturned bucket and began to fill a pipe. Josh watched him in silence for some moments, and then said, suddenly:—

"She ain't come alone."

The match Steve had just struck burned out unheeded in his fingers. His face whitened under the tan, for there was something in the speaker's tone which told him more than the words implied. He did not speak, but Josh needed no spur now.

"A yaller-faced chap, with black hair an' eyes, looks like a half-breed 'greaser,'" he said. "Wears a biled shirt, store clothes, and flashes his joolery considerable."

"An' does Fairy—that is Miss McQueen—he corrected himself and bowed ironically towards the bushes—"think anything of this—this—thing!"

The bushes swayed and rustled slightly as though in acknowledgment of his courtesy, and Josh flung a lump of clay into them.

"Durn that blue-jay pal o' yours," he said. "I dunno her opinion of him, but he 'pears to think an almighty lot of her—or of the old man's dollars. He's a relation of sorts, I heard. an'. if I'm any judge, Noo York ain't grievin' any over his absence."

Steve did not answer; his thoughts were back in the little clearing a hundred yards away, where, two years before, a girl in a short, shabby frock, with hair the color of ripe corn, and blue eyes laden with unshed tears, had put her hand in his and made him promise to write to her. He recalled his letter—he knew every word—and lived again the weary months of waiting for the reply that never came. Too proud to write again, he had deduced his own reasons for her silence—she was wealthy, moving in a new sphere, making new friends, and she had either forgotten or despised her old ones. Little by little the iron had entered, and so, when the news came that she was to return, he determined to hold aloof.

When he awoke from his reverie Josh had vanished into the shanty they called home, and Steve shattered another lump of clay. What nonsense had he been thinking? After all, the girl was free—no word of love had passed between them. What did it matter to him if this dandy admirer was a scamp? he asked himself, scornfully. But he knew it did.

Why else should he have ignored his determination and visited McQueen's saloon that very evening? Mere curiosity was deemed a sufficient excuse to give Josh; but if he thought it deceived the little man, he was mistaken. Josh noticed that his partner "slicked himself up" before setting out, and he executed a solemn little step-dance as soon as he had the cabin to himself.

Whatever faint hopes Steve might have been harboring died when he entered the saloon. There was, as Josh had said, a "difference" indeed. The slim slip of a girl had developed into a shapely, handsome young woman, fashionably dressed and perfectly at ease. Steve understood just how his partner had felt, and himself hung back until old McQueen, standing proudly by his daughter's side, saw him and called him up. The girl shook hands, made a casual allusion to old times, and then turned to another of the crowd pressing around. Her father dragged him to the bar.

"Give it a name, my boy!" he said. "All free to-night, you know, in honor of my girl's homecoming." Then, lowering his voice, he added: "What d'ye think of her, eh? You were agin her goin'—said it would spoil her. What's your idea now?"

Steve did not answer, and the old man chuckled in gleeful triumph. "It's cost money," he continued, "but I reckon it's worth it, and say, see who's talkin' to her now?"

Deane did see, and his teeth met as he watched her eyes light up, and the other men fall back at the approach of the stranger. As Josh had said, he looked like a half-bred Mexican, with lank black hair, sallow face, and shifty eyes. His youth, flashy attire, and evident intimacy with McQueen's beautiful daughter clearly impressed the simple—in some ways—miners of Red Pine.

"He's a kind of distant relation she unearthed in Noo York," McQueen confided. "Jest rollin' in money—estates in Spain, y' know."

gusted with his luck and the part he was playing, Steve left the saloon earlier than usual. Climbing up the trail, he was astonished to see a dark shadow slip quickly in to a shanty, the owner of which—Irish Pat—he had just left in the saloon. Noiselessly he approached and peeped through the unlatched door. The faint glimmer of a candle-end showed him the bent form of a man groping beneath the shake-down. It was not Pat.

He drew back and waited. In a few moments the intruder slipped out, and with one silent stride Steve confronted him—pistol in hand.

"Hands up!" The command was obeyed so promptly that the man's hat was jerked back, and Steve saw that his capture was Paul Mendez, whose right hand still clutched the little leather bag of gold dust which represented Irish Pat's fortune.

After the first shock of surprise Steve was conscious only of a feeling of grim triumph. This man whom McQueen thought so much of—this Spanish grandee with estates in Spain—was nothing more than a common thief, caught red-handed stealing the gold he spent so lavishly in sustaining his reputation. And this man had stolen the girl he loved. But it was his turn now.

"Keep your hands up and walk ahead," he said, grimly. "Don't drop that bag, if you want to live another minute."

"Goin' to give me up?" queried the captive. "Why not go halves?" "You've guessed it," said Steve; and added, fiercely, "And if I hadn't been I would now, you dog. Step out."

The other drew hard on the cigarette which quivered between his lips, but he made another attempt. "And the lady," he sneered. "How pleased she will be!"

Steve paused; the words went home, shivering his dream of triumph to atoms. Thief or no, this man was the man Nora loved—the man she was to wed; and though to give him to justice would save her from that, there would be the shame, the blow to her pride. He made his decision quickly.

"You'll have urgent business in New York to-morrow," he said. "And you'll not come back. You understand?"

"Sure," said Mendez. "Then drop that bag and clear out," Steve said, sharply.

The thief obeyed with alacrity. A few yards away he turned his head, and saw Steve pick up the gold and re-enter the hut. His hand stole to his pistol as he paused irresolutely. Then a fiendish grin distorted his face as the murmur of approaching voices reached him. He hurried forward, and almost tumbled into the arms of Irish Pat and another miner.

"Thought you were at home, Pat," he said, familiarly. "Saw you go into your shanty two minutes ago."

Pat wasted no time in questions, but ran for his hut and dashed open the door just as Steve was replacing the stolen gold. Covered by the Irishman's revolver, Steve realized how he had been trapped, and that explanations would be useless. He now learned, for the first time, that several similar thefts had occurred during the past few days.

prisoner leaves the court without a stain on his character."

A burst of cheering ratified the verdict, and the prisoner found himself the hub of an enthusiastic crowd, which, after meeting to deprive him of his life, now unanimously expressed a wish to drink his good health.

When at length he managed to escape, a desire for solitude took him to the little clearing. Flung himself down on the pine-needles he tried to think things out. He had not been there long when the bushes rustled, and he looked up impatiently, fancying Josh had come in search of him. But it was a girl who appeared—a girl in a shabby frock, with golden hair hanging in a plait behind—and at the sight of her he started up.

"Fairy!" he cried. And again, "Fairy!"

"I've come to answer your letter," she said. "I got it this morning—sent on from New York—it was in a mail robbery, and they've only just found it. I waited and waited for it, and then, when you didn't even come to welcome me home, I thought you didn't care." The blue eyes were downcast now, but a smile trembled on her lips as she added, "But if you had come her ladyship would have condescended to remember you, Steve."

"You heard that?" he cried.

"Durn that blue-jay pal o' yours," she said, mimicking Josh, and flinging an imaginary piece of clay at the bushes. "Yes, I heard all, and that's what made me act so mean to you, Steve; I wanted to pretend I didn't care, either."

"Pretend!" Steve repeated, and then—well, the blue-jay is not one of those little birds that tell tales.

"And you are sure they haven't quite spoilt me, Steve?" she teased.

"Quite sure," he answered; "but"—and his eyes laughed—"I expect I shall."—London Tit-Bits.

ONE HOUR OF ROAD BUILDING

How a Highway Across a Great State was Re-constructed in One Day.

The people in Montgomery county, Kan., by volunteer work, built a modern highway 20 miles long. That record is outclassed by something that has been done by citizens of Iowa. The greatest piece of road-building on record was accomplished in that state recently when in the space of one single hour a line of road 380 miles in length and stretching entirely across the state was put in the most perfect condition of any road west of the Mississippi river. Weeks and months were spent in preparation for the work, but not a pick or shovel was used until the designated second was ticked off. Then, as if by magic, 10,000 workmen swarmed out to the roadway, and when they ceased work 60 minutes later Iowa had one of the finest long-distance roads in the entire west.

And not the least interesting thing in connection with the tremendous piece of work is the fact that not a man of the entire 10,000 engaged are responsible for the splendid showing. Last winter the Iowa roads became so fearfully bad that traffic was practically killed and farmers were simply compelled to remain in their homes. Finally the matter became a political question

NAMED IT AFTER YANKEE

DOWNING STREET, LONDON, IS FAMOUS.

Identified With Governing Power, Owes Its Existence To An American.

Visitors from all parts of the world who gaze their way through London are not aware, perhaps, that the very hub of the British Government owes its existence to an American. Downing street is synonymous with the governing power in the United Kingdom, and it was named after a Yankee. True, George Downing—Sir George Downing they had to make him in the long run—didn't know he was a Harvard graduate. In his day there wasn't any Harvard so far as the name went. The present University was the only public school of Massachusetts. But young Downing was graduated from it just the same, and his name is entitled to a place with these other dead-and-gone alumni. And it was he who built England's world-famous Downing street.

George Downing was born in America. His was a constructive genius. He put up his own rooms in what now is Harvard—bought the boards and nails and glass himself, and built the little wing with his own hands. Then, having provided a college home for himself, he set about his studies. He studied to such purpose that when he went to England in quest of a career he found one cut out for him. They made a diplomat of the man. Charles II. sent him to the Hague as Ambassador, and incidentally, being a thrifty as well as a merry monarch, took occasion to sell him the little lane along which Henry VIII. had been wont to stroll from Whitehall Palace to see cock fights. Sir George afterwards became Secretary to the Treasury.

FIRST BRICK HOUSES.

Downing street is 100 yards long and 10 yards wide. In its confines Sir George built the first brick houses of importance ever put up in London. His children and grandchildren owned the whole street until Baron Bothmar, then Danish Ambassador to England, bought No. 10 in 1734. About the only thing the Dane did worth chronicling was to die there. No. 10 reverted to the Crown, and George II., thrifty as the Merry Monarch, offered it to Sir Richard Walpole. Just what King George expected to get in return from his Minister is not known. Sir Robert was too fine a fellow to take the great house as a gift, but he accepted it as the official residence of the Lords of the Treasury. As Britain's first Lord of the Treasury usually is Prime Minister as well, No. 10 Downing street is the headquarters of the Premier.

PITT'S DWELLING PLACE.

A desperate attack, fizzling out to mere window-smashing, was made on No. 10 by the Gordon rioters, when Lord North lived there. The great Pitt was so fond of No. 10 that when he could avoid it he never slept elsewhere. He dwelt in the house twenty years. All that

"He's a kind of distant relation she unearthed in Noo York," McQueen confided. "Jest rollin' in money—estates in Spain, ye know—and though I don't cotton to fur-riners ez a rule, Norrie might do worse."

Steve did not stay long. He had to make the acquaintance of the stranger, Paul Mendez, and with their hands their eyes met in one keen flash, and each knew the other for an enemy.

For the next few weeks Josh found his partner a burden. Nothing pleased him. A spirit of unrest seemed to have taken possession of him, and he spoke seriously of quitting Red Pine altogether. The claim, from which they were surely, if slowly, amassing a modest fortune, was put forward as his reason.

"Mebbe there's richer claims elsewhere, as you say," Stebb argued, "but there's plenty 'wore. We're doin' well, and in say, five years—"

"Five years!" broke in Steve impatiently. "I can't wait five years. What's the good of money to me when?"—he stopped short, and finished lamely—"when I'm an old man?"

The conclusion was obviously absurd, but Josh accepted it. He knew what the real trouble was, just as he knew why Steve—whose visits to the settlements used to be rare events—now went every night, and spent more money at the saloon than he could well afford. Steve himself did not realize why he went; he was simply conscious that he could not stay away. Certainly Nora gave him no encouragement, for her manner to him was even distant at times, and a disinterested spectator would have noticed that she was kindest to Mendez when Steve was there to see it.

The young miner knew it, and drew his own inferences. Nevertheless, when, after a few weeks, his rival openly boasted that the girl would soon be his, and produced a photograph of herself which he said she had given him, Steve gave him the lie, and backed the assertion by a blow which sent Mendez rolling in the dust. Nothing but the quickest intervention of the bystanders saved Steve from being shot down by the furious Spaniard. When Deane next met Miss McQueen his gratitude to those who had saved his life at once became a doubtful quantity.

"Mr. Deane," she said coldly, "the mere accident of your being an old friend does not entitle you to insult newer ones. I did give Paul the photograph, though the silly fellow need not have made the fact so public."

A slight smile and a blush accompanied the last sentence, and Steve's teeth set in his lower lip—turned away without a word. He knew the worst now, and partly to get away from his own thoughts, and partly in a spirit of bravado which urged him to show the girl that he did not care, he frequented the saloon more than ever, and even took to gambling—a thing he had never been partial to. The old proverb, "Unlucky in love, lucky in play," did not apply in his case, for he was unlucky in both. The sums he lost moved even Josh to expostulation, and to that worthy being curtly told to mind his own affairs.

Then came a night when, dis-useless, the now clearing, for the first time, that several similar thefts had occurred during the past few days.

At the hour fixed for the trial, the saloon—where all important events took place—was crowded. McQueen was elected judge, and the selection of a jury was but a matter of moments.

The prisoner, his hands bound behind him, and guarded by a pair of stalwart, armed miners—surveyed the proceedings with calm gravity. He knew his case was hopeless, and his only comforting thought was that Nora, visiting a neighboring camp, would not be back till it was all over.

One by one the victims of the previous robberies detailed their losses, and then Irish Pat told the story of the arrest, corroborated by his companion. Moreover, it was common knowledge that the prisoner had lost heavily at cards, and that supplied a motive. Even Josh, listening to the incriminating recital, could see no loophole of escape for his partner. Honestly, in such a community, was an essential factor, and from men who regarded the shooting of a card-cheat as a justifiable act a mean thief could expect no mercy. Asked if he had anything to say, the prisoner shrugged his shoulders and was dumb.

"Anyone want to speak for the prisoner?" asked the judge.

"Yes," said a silvery voice, and from behind the bar appeared Miss Nora. "I've heard all the evidence and you've got the wrong man, dad," she said, with a feminine disregard of the judicial dignity. Then, turning to the prisoner, she asked: "Steve, did you take the gold?"

"Yes," replied Steve firmly; and a ripple of mirth disturbed the assembly.

The girl was nonplussed for a moment by the unexpected answer, but her eyes never left the prisoner's face.

"From whom did you take it?" she asked, and when he would not answer she continued: "You caught the thief, took the gold from him, and when Pat arrived you were putting it back. Isn't that so?"

Still Steve was silent. The girl did not falter; her eyes swept the crowd of faces until they encountered those of her so-called relative, and in a flash the truth came to her.

"The man you are trying to shield—the real thief—stands there! He calls himself Mendez, she cried.

The Spaniard—whiter than the slim fingers directing all eyes to him—strove vainly to speak.

"Why should Deane shield the man he hated?" asked the judge.

The girl's face flushed, but she answered proudly: "For me; because he thought I cared for—that."

The scorn in her voice, with the ruin of his hopes in the very moment of his triumph, lashed Mendez to a sudden fury. With a snarling oath he whipped out his revolver and levelled it at his accuser. Ere he could press the trigger, however, he tumbled headlong, an inert mass.

"I'm sorry," the judge said, regretfully; "I'd rather have hanged the mean skunk, but it couldn't be helped. Now, boys, I put it to you that counsel for the defence has proved her case, an' that the roads became so fearfully bad that traffic was practically killed and farmers were simply compelled to remain in their homes. Finally the matter became a political question and both parties got behind the movement. Gov. Carroll called a "good roads" meeting at Des Moines early last March, and out of this meeting was evolved the plan of a "river-to-river" road, stretching from Council Bluffs, on the Missouri River, to Davenport, on the Mississippi, a distance of 380 miles straight across the state from east to west. "Make the river-to-river road as near perfect as is possible to make just common dirt," was the sense of the good roads convention.

Instead of appointing new committees to handle the work, the regular republican and democratic committees in each country through which the road would pass were appealed to. The chairman of the committee of each party was asked to get in the game and work for the road. Everybody agreed to do so, and soon a rivalry was created between republicans and democrats, each to see which party would have the most workmen "on the job" when the time for work arrived.

A Saturday was selected as the day and from 9 to 10 o'clock the hour of work. Every farmer along the way was personally seen by the committee and agreed to give the one hour that was asked for. Farmers were asked to bring their plows, scrapers and road drays, and an organization equal to those employed in professional railroad building was worked out. In the weeks preceding the work all bridges and culverts along the road were repaired and put in first-class order, that no delay might come to the road builders when once this "lat-ter" started working.

The result of the organization was shown on the appointed Saturday. Shortly before 9 o'clock in the morning farmers began getting out in the road. Hundreds and thousands of plows, picks, shovels, scrapers, road drags, grading-machines and other implements were brought along. Every farmer brought his team with him. Superintendents and overseers had been appointed in readiness when promptly at 9 o'clock the order was issued to "fall to." And 10,000 determined men "fell to." For an hour they continued, working with might and main. At 10 o'clock the job was finished, and the farmers went back to their fields, leaving Iowa the possessor of the finest piece of long-distance roadway in the West.

"I guess that's right," rejoined the old lawyer, "judging by the amount of pumping we have to do in order to get a little of it."

TO RAISE THE TEMPERATURE.

Frank had been sent to the hardware store for a thermometer.

"Did mother say what size?" asked the clerk.

"Oh," answered Frank, "gimme the highest one you've got. It's to warm my bedroom with."

ers, when Lord North lived there. The great Pitt was so fond of No. 10 that when he could avoid it he never slept elsewhere. He dwelt in the house twenty years. All that time Downing street was getting a reputation. Until 1780 the Ministers dated all their official communications, "The Cockpit, Whitehall," as the place had come to be called early in the sixteenth century. Not until 1793 did "Downing Street" definitely take the place of "The Cockpit," at the head of the Government papers. Downing street was built on a swamp, and the ground under the big houses is sown thickly with age-blackened wooden piles.

THE THIRSTY TRADES.

Occupations Which, It is Said, Pre-dispose to Drinking.

An address was delivered recently at a meeting of the Society of Medical Officers of Health, London, England, on the relation of public health to industrial diseases by Dr. W. F. Dearden, medical officer of health to the port of Manchester.

Dr. Dearden said that alcoholism appeared to pick out certain trades in the exercise of its deleterious effects. Workers subjected to excessive heat, as in glass works and rubber works, were on account of the thirst created addicted to the use of alcoholic drinks and suffered accordingly.

There were also certain outdoor occupations involving exposure to vicissitudes of the weather which had a similar influence, and the alcoholic tendency of printers, hatters and shoemakers was well known.

Indulgence in this excess by work-people engaged in certain unhealthy processes was highly injurious. Waterproof cloth spreaders, who were subjected to naphtha fumes, were very rapidly affected by alcohol and it was well known how suicidal it was for workers in lead to indulge in the habit. The rapid breakdown through alcoholism of men engaged in arduous occupations was well illustrated in the iron and shipbuilding trades.

Insufficient air space and bad ventilation had a distinct influence on the creation of lassitude in workers through rendering the respired air impure. Carbonic acid had an ill effect upon both nervous and muscular tissue, so that an excess of this blood, associated with the products of muscle activity and deficiency in oxygen, readily explained the tiredness of a worker subjected to these conditions and his consequent inability to get through his work in a satisfactory manner.

Further, arduous occupations, such as rivetting in shipbuilding yards, created a severe strain on the muscular powers and work in compressed air should only be executed during short periods. In certain dangerous processes also short working shifts were highly essential.

PICTURE OF MONTREAL JAIL

Governor Valee Calls It a Breeding Place for Crime and Disease

A despatch from Montreal says: Governor Valee of the Montreal jail stated on Wednesday that he has 421 prisoners packed into the jail, whereas he has only accommodation for 225. He says the jail is a breeding place for crime and disease.

"The number goes on increasing," he added, "and will increase, and we can do nothing, but simply pack them in wherever we have a square inch of space. If there was once a blaze started here every soul would be burned like a cockroach, and the holocaust would be the worst which would have ever happened in Canada."

"I tell you I cannot sleep at night's wondering what is going to happen. I am beset by fears on every side. Discipline is suffering, for we cannot handle our prisoners with conditions as they are at present. How can we? or how can we try to use reformatory methods under such conditions? Instead of sending our prisoners back to society repentant and determined to become good citizens, they are leaving here, if possible, worse than when they entered. Vice is rampant in the jail; you have no idea of what goes on, it is the worst of all the terribly difficult problems with which we have to deal, but we cannot stop it, we cannot apply any remedies, for we have not got them to apply."

TO REFOREST.

American Lumber Firm Will Plant Trees in New Brunswick.

A despatch from St. John, N. B., says: Following an extensive investigation on reforestation, an American lumber company, now operating in New Brunswick, plans immediate action in reforesting the more denuded parts of the province. Nurseries will be established at Salmon River and Matins Head, where trees will be grown from seed. The Company has 50,000 acres at Cookshire, Quebec, which will be seeded this spring. The work to be done this year, it is understood, is merely preparatory to extensive reforestation in New Brunswick and Maine.

AXE USED DURING QUARREL.

Mrs. Boujamra Charged With Attempted Murder.

A despatch from Cobalt says: Mrs. F. Boujamra, a Syrian, was given a preliminary hearing on Wednesday afternoon on the charge of attempted murder, the result of a quarrel with Mrs. George Alies on Tuesday. The women were quarrelling about their children, when Mrs. Boujamra is alleged to have picked up an axe and struck the other woman over the head and boarders, Michael McMahon, aged 47, lost their lives. John Quinlan, who had retired to rest fully dressed, was almost suffocated when he awoke to find the house in flames. The heat was so intense and the smoke so thick that Quinlan made a hurried escape through one of the windows on the stairway, and raised an alarm. Quinlan's face and hands were badly burned. When the brigade arrived the fire was quickly extinguished. Groping their way through the house the firemen discovered the dead bodies of Phillips and McMahon and also the body of Mrs. Phillips, aged 70, who was lying unconscious on the dining-room floor.

CARLOAD OF LIQUOR SEIZED.

Constables on Hand When Goods Arrive at Cochrane.

A despatch from Toronto says: A carload of whiskey and beer—the largest quantity of liquor ever smuggled into the north country—was seized at Cochrane early on Friday morning by Provincial constables, who had been watching for it for hours. In the car the constables found 150 cases of whiskey, enough to supply the blind piggers in Cochrane and the surrounding construction camps for several weeks. The Provincial Police Department received word that the car, shipped from either Toronto or Montreal, was being sent over the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railroad. Constables Lefebvre and Stewart were notified, and when the car arrived at Cochrane they stationed themselves near the siding. Several hours later the seal of the car was broken, and the constables got busy.

A despatch from San Francisco, Cal., says: The wireless operator at the station in this city held a conversation for an hour on Monday night with the operator at Choshi Shimosa, on the coast of Japan, 5,700 miles away. The messages were passed across the Pacific with one relay. The operator got into communication with two of the Pacific Mail Company's steamers, the Manchuria, 3,295 miles away, bound from Hong Kong, and the Korea, about 70 miles nearer. Both vessels took his message to the Japanese station asking for the weather report, and both received the reply, and relayed it.

SALARIES RAISED.

Winnipeg Teachers to Get as Much as Any Others on Continent.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The salaries of all teachers, with the exception of the principals, in the Public schools of Winnipeg have been voluntarily raised. The new schedule places the schools of his city on a basis as high as that in any other city in America. The minimum for inexperienced teachers has been raised from $450 to $500. Regular teachers will be paid $650 to $800 for the first year, instead of $575 to $725. The maximum is to be reached at the end of the eighth year instead of the ninth as before, and it will range from $900 to $1,000 instead from $800 to $850.

The outlook for the future, Governor Williams declared, was never brighter. He spoke particularly of the success which has been attained in the pulp and paper industry. Following the Governor's remarks, the Legislature, on the motion of the Premier, Sir Edward Morris, adopted a resolution declaring the loyalty of the colony to King George.

SHOT FRIEND AND HIMSELF.

Murder and Suicide by a Vancouver Laborer.

A despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says: For a reason yet unexplained, J. Follett, a city laborer, living in a cabin in Fairview, on living in a cabin next to his own. Wednesday morning shot and killed Sam Norris, a well digger, who Follett then shot himself, and was rushed to the hospital, where he lingered until the afternoon, when he also died. When asked if he had done the shooting, although unable to articulate, he nodded his head in the affirmative. Both men were bachelors, and lived in cabins which opened upon a common verandah. About 8.30 o'clock on Wednesday morning neighbors heard a shot and saw Follett come from Norris' cabin with a shotgun in his hand and enter his own dwelling. A moment later a second shot was heard. When the police arrived, Norris was found lying on the verandah with his face almost blown off. Follett had fired a similar charge into his own head. Both men were middle-aged.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

Montreal, Feb. 14.—Choice steers sold at 6½c; good at 6¼ to 6½c; fairly good at 5½ to 6c; fair at 5¼ to 5½c, and the lower grades at 4½ to 5c per pound. Sheep sold at 4¼ to 4½c, and lambs at 6¼ to 6½c per pound. The market for hogs opened stronger; $8.00 per 100 pounds for selected lots weighed off cars. The demand for calves was good, and sales were made at prices ranging from $3 to $15 each, as to size and quality.

Toronto, Feb. 14.—A price that was paid for a good many cattle was $6.10, but that was as high as they went. Even canners were quoted as high as $3.25. Lambs were up to $6.60, and sheep were firm at $4.25 to $4.75 for ewes and $3.50 to $4 for bucks and culls. Calves were quoted as high as $8.75 for the best veals and no lower than $3.75 for the poorest. There was no change in the situation with regard to hogs. There were a few milch cows on the market, but $60 was the best figure recorded. The trade for milkers and springers has been off color for some time.

from Consul Gracey, at Nanking, enclosing letters from some of the missionaries in the famine districts. The Rev. E. C. Lobenstine found almost two-thirds of the 300,000 people in the country of Hwai-Juan absolutely destitute, and not more than 20 per cent. of the population can provide for themselves (unaided) through the winter and spring. The poor are trying to sell their children; but they can scarcely obtain a pittance for them.

PLOT TO KILL TWO KINGS.

Bombs for Victor Emmanuel and Peter of Servia.

A despatch from Rome says: The Tribune prints a circumstantial story of an Anarchist plot to throw bombs at King Victor Emmanuel and King Peter of Servia, who is to visit Rome shortly. The paper says that an Italian Anarchist named Dautele, who resided in New York and London and who is now here, expected to be joined by two other Anarchists from London. These were arrested at Trieste and the plot was frustrated.

SHOT FOR A BURGLAR.

Nova Scotia Man Seriously Wounds a Neighbor.

A despatch from Sydney, N. S., says: Louis Sodoisk put two bullets into Antonio Ariatook, a Polander, on Friday. Sodoisky found a man entering his house through a window early on Friday morning, holding a glittering object in his hand. Sodoisky secured his own revolver, and thinking to scare the intruder, fired twice. Both shots took effect, one entering the head and the other breaking one hand. Sodoisky was the first to acquaint the authorities of the affray. He was released on $1,000 bail.

PROGRESSIVE PROGRAMME.

Opening of the Legislature of Manitoba.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The thirteenth Legislature of Manitoba opened on Thursday. The great questions to be considered are the regulation of the liquor traffic and the extension of the system of public ownership of the elevators and telephones. The speech from the Throne expresses regret that no progress has been made in the settlement of Provincial boundaries; refers to the Government acquiring grain elevators; promises extensions to the Government system of telephones; announces a scheme of roads development and a move for higher education and larger grants for educational purposes.

ROYALTY HAS MEASLES.

The Prince of Wales and His Brother Albert Both Attacked.

A despatch from London says: Two of the sons of King George, the Prince of Wales and his brother, Albert, are ill with measles at the Naval College at Dartmouth. Sixty of their fellow-cadets are afflicted with the same ailment.

A SCARCITY OF DRY FISH

Last Cargo of Cod Sells in Nova Scotia for the Highest Price on Record

A despatch from Halifax N. S., says: The scarcity of dry fish in Nova Scotia is alarming, and the great problem is how the consumer is going to get along until the spring catch is marketed, which will not be for three or four months. The last cargo of Lunenburg fish, in first hands, has been disposed of, and with the exception of stocks held by retailers the market has been cleaned up. The last cargo of cod was sold at Lunenburg for $6 a quintal, which is the highest on record. There is reported to be some stock in the dealers' hands in St. John's, Nfld., but the quantity is limited, and there are three months yet before new fish will reach the market, and the small quantity now in St. John's will soon be taken up. Add to this the fact that the green fish on the coast has been bought up and there is none to dry in the early Spring, as in other years, the situation is unprecedented in the history of the salt fish trade.

Notwithstanding that prices were high months ago, there have been further advances, and the situation is so serious that the consumption abroad will have to be curtailed.

British Unionists cannot agree as to line of action in regard to veto.

THE KAISER'S ILLNESS.

German Public Somewhat Alarmed Over Official Reports.

A despatch from Berlin says: So many contradictory reports have been issued regarding the nature and extent of the Kaiser's illness that the public is becoming alarmed. The Berlin correspondent of The London Telegraph, on Monday, wired his paper as follows: "When a responsible department contradicts itself in such a manner, it is not surprising that the official statements regarding the Kaiser's health are received with considerable suspicion." The apprehension of the public will undoubtedly continue until the Kaiser resumes his public appearances. All the Kaiser's immediate engagements have been cancelled. It is still insisted that the Emperor is suffering from an aggravated cold.

WILD MAN OF NEW-ONTARIO

Captured After Desperate Struggle and Will be Sent to Asylum

A despatch from Fort William, Ont., says: To all appearances as wild as the denizens of the New Ontario forest, which have been his sole companions for the past four years, John Beck, about 40 years of age, garbed in crudely fashioned coat and trousers of skins, was taken through Fort William from Vermillion Bay, about a hundred miles north-west of this city, to Kenora, on Wednesday, where he will be committed to an institution for the violently insane. Since the winter of 1907, when he lost part of his hands while dynamiting for fish, Beck has lived in the wilderness near Vermillion Bay, a new station of Grand Trunk Pacific. Although his identity and place of abode, a crevice in a rock twenty miles from the nearest dwelling, were not known until a few days ago, he was feared by construction men and the few lumbermen who visited the district. Fleet of foot and as wary as an untamed beast, he never allowed his fellowmen to approach him. At the sight of a human being he invariably vanished in the dense bush. He was finally captured after a desperate struggle by Canadian Pacific Railway Constable Ball, of this city, and a Dominion constable of Ignace. He had existed during the four years on raw fish, rabbits and fowl, which he snared or killed with stones or clubs. In the house nature had fashioned for him were found only a pile of dry leaves, two or three dried skins, and a pile of stones.

KING'S GLASS COACH BURNED

Vehicle 200 Years Old Has Been Destroyed.

A despatch from London says: The antique glass coach belonging to the King and the barouche owned by the Queen, both of which were to have been used in the Coronation procession next June, were destroyed by a fire in the shop of the coach builders on Thursday night. The coach was very valuable. It was the so-called Acorn coach, and was 200 years old. It was made of English ash, and weighed three tons. It was at the carriage shop for the purpose of being varnished.

SERUM IS EFFECTIVE.

Its Early Use Checks Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis.

A despatch from New York says: The Rockefeller Institute for medical research announced on Monday that the effectiveness of anti-meningitis serum had been generally accepted by medical authorities throughout the world, and that the new remedy had taken its place with vaccine and diphtheria antitoxin "as an improved agency for the protection of public health."

AID FOR CAMPBELLTON.

New Brunswick Government Will Make a Grant of $50,000.

A despatch from Fredericton, N. B., says: Judge McLatchey and F. F. Matthieson, of Campbellton, N. B., waited on Premier Hazen on Wednesday at the Government offices and discussed the details of legislation for aid promised the fire-stricken Town of Campbellton. The Province of New Brunswick, under legislation to be introduced at the approaching session of the Legislature, will give assistance to the stricken town to the amount of $50,000, and the legislation will call for the amount to be paid in ten annual instalments.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The dread of the pneumonic plague, which prevails in Manchuria, reaching Europe seems to have been realized. A report from Pensa states that a man from the maritime province of the Far East, was found sick on a train there, apparently suffering from the plague. His car and five others containing 124 passengers have been isolated and surrounded by a military guard.

WHICH WAS IT?

Charlie Thompson had read about iceboats, and he thought he would make one. So he took a little boat he had, put some runners on it, and tried to sail it on the pond, which was close by the village. But it would not go, for some reason, and he was very much vexed over it. The next day, as he was going to school, he met Lizzie Brent, who called out to him as they passed: "O Charlie, I hear you have an ice-boat!" "I haven't a nice boat," said he, crossly, and added to himself, in an undertone, "It's a very poor one." The next day Lizzie was going by the pond when she saw Charlie working at his boat. "Why, Charlie," said she, "I thought you told me yesterday you hadn't an ice-boat!" "Well, I haven't got a nice boat,"

FEARS OF BUBONIC PLAGUE

Europe Cannot Be Infected Save Through Criminal Carelessness.

A despatch from Paris says: Dr. Burnet of the Faculty of Paris University, who has made a special study of the bubonic plague, affirms that the sole means of preventing its spread from Manchuria to Europe is by isolation. Dr. Elie Metchnikoff of the Pasteur Institute is of the same opinion, and, by showing the possibility of successfully isolating the plague, he is prompt to reassure the French public, which has lately been watching the reports from Eastern Asia with considerable apprehension. He adds that even the frightful mortality in Manchuria is, in fact, a safeguard for Europe, for the reason that the plague ceases to advance only when it ceases to find material upon which to feed within its immediate reach. Dr. Burnet says on this head: "The greater the number of quick deaths from the plague the smaller the number of perambulating victims of the plague. It is from the latter that the world at large has most to fear. The work of the European physicians who are fighting the plague in Manchuria is more sanitary than medical. "In spite of the speedy communication of the Trans-Siberian Railway," concludes Dr. Burnet, "Europe will not be infected unless it is done through absolutely criminal carelessness. The very character of the plague, together with our modern sanitary organizations, protects us."

Sloppy, leaky wooden troughs, or clean, durable Concrete ?

Wooden drinking troughs are about as reliable as the weather.

They are short-lived and require replacing every few years—not to mention continual patching to keep them in repair.

The best of wood cannot withstand, for long, constant dampness and soaking. Its tendency to rapid decay soon shows itself in leaks and stagnant pools of water around trough.

Contrast with this the durability, cleanliness and well-ordered appearance of Concrete.

What Other Papers Say.

It will be a terrible thing if the people of the United States recklessly sell us some things we want to buy, and buy some things we want to sell. Ruin and devastation are predicted on both sides of the line as inevitable results.

London Advocate.

"Reciprocity in tariffs will greatly tend to procure for this country, eventually, a reciprocity of trade," said Sir John Macdonald in his national policy resolution, thirty-three years ago. Would Sir John, if he had lived, howl against reciprocity to-day?

Fredericton (N. B.) Mail.

If the Canadian people will consider the agreement on its merits, freeing themselves from the influence of the protectionist interests and the influence of seekers of party gain, they will be found strongly favorable to it. And The Mail believes that the Canadian people are self-reliant enough to exercise their own judgment in this as in all other matters.

Stratford Beacon.

The Ross government was recklessly extravagant in the opinion of Col. Matheson, the present provincial treasurer, when it increased the annual expenditure by $10,000 a year. The Whitney government which has increased the expenditure by $1,000,000 a year is, in the gallant colonel's estimation, economical. It seems to make all the difference who spends the money.

Calgary Herald, (Con)

The chief, almost the only, argument being used in Canada on behalf of the reciprocity bill is that it opens to this country the United States market in natural products. This is certainly true. The advantage of it to certain portions of the Dominion is undoubted. Furthermore, the change thus involved is inevitable, for that market will be opened whether we make this reciprocity deal or not.

The Montreal Star has gone into into hysterics against reciprocity. All of us are to go to the demilitarization bowwows, and Canada is to be wiped out. Very many people harbor the belief that newspapers are eager to publish derogatory things. It's a mistake. There isn't a newspaper that could not spring a sensation in the community at any time by merely telling what it knows. There is not a newspaper that does not keep under the lock of secrecy scores of derogatory things which never meet the public eye or reach the public ear. Deciding what not to print is the most troublesome part of newspaper work.

New York Sun.

To the philosophic mind all this discussion and concussion about reciprocity between Canada and the United States recalls that ancient apologue and moral dear to the old-fashioned spelling book, of the gored ox. Stripped of all waddings and paddings of philanthropy, public spirit, humanitarian theory, the self-interest is naked to every eye. Reformers, Insurgents, Revisionists, all the solemn or passionate humbugs, not always conscious, that have been strutting up and down howling against "the interests," now betray themselves as part of the supposed "interests," frankly and predaulously fighting for their own hand and pocket. Nobody cares a rap for the consumers, if consumers there are. The public and general interests be hanged! The farming "interests," the fishing "interests," and so on squeal to the startled heavens, fearing that a benevolent but temporarily misguided Government is going to skimp the swill. Without having to believe that reciprocity is a sacred bull, like the heaven-born tariff, whose eccentricities are to be palliated by it; regarding reciprocity indeed with something of that polite and humorous toleration which the judicious and experienced have had to bestow upon so many rainbow pots of gold revealed at Washington, can we salute without a

Administration of Justice—Industrial Education—Local Option—Reformation—Immigration and Colonization, All Dealt With.

On the resumption of the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, Hon. Mr. MacKay, leader of the Opposition, in a brilliant 45-minute speech, gave a concise and masterly review of provincial problems. His speech, in part, was as follows:

"Mr. Speaker,—It is fitting that the opening sentences of the speech of the Lieutenant-Governor, which was placed in his hands by his constitutional advisers, should contain a reference to the demise of King Edward VII. and to the far-reaching influence for good which he exerted throughout his whole reign. No British subject knows, no British subject will ever know, how great was the influence exercised by our late King, making for the peace of the whole world. His very extended ties of affinity and consanguinity were doubtless used to advantage with all other European monarchs. His was a reign that made for peace, that tended to bring about if not the age itself, at least the spirit of the age, when men shall beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning-hooks; and when the nations of the earth shall have learned to submit international difficulties not to the arbitration of the sword, but to the decision of such tribunals as that of The Hague, which recently has done such splendid work and has removed forever as between us and the great nation to the South of us, a large number of irritating and mischief-making difficulties. That reminds me, Sir, that we are nearing the celebration of the century mark of peace between this nation and our cousins to the South; a celebration in which I have no doubt this Province and this Dominion will take a fitting and prominent part. Notwithstanding the exasperating recollections of the War of 1812, Canada and the United States have set the world an excellent example of how two nations with a 3,000-mile non-fortressed and un-garrisoned frontier may live at peace as neighbor nations ought to.

Lack of Content and Intent.

Coming to that portion of the speech which reviews the past Administration and the expected legislation of the present Government I may be permitted to remark, Sir, that the most noticeable feature of the whole speech is its absolute lack of content and particularly of intent on the part of the Government.

Prison Labor.

With reference to the question of prison labor, while there has no doubt been a great deal of laudable work done in the way of employing prisoners, yet, Sir, I would like to suggest to the Honorable, the Provincial Secretary, the idea of considering

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within five miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section along side his homestead. Price, $100 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent and cultivate fifty acres extra).

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $300 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

reciprocity indeed with something of that polite and humorous toleration which the judicious and experienced have had to bestow upon so many rainbow pots of gold revealed at Washington, can we salute without a grin the appearance as Robber Barons of humanity's last hope, the prop of our institutions, the beloved, the down-trodden speeder of the plough?

THE KICKER.

An Entirely Different Sort of Man From the Growler.

There is a world of difference between the man who kicks and the man who growls.

The man who kicks—who truly, earnestly and honestly kicks—is a good kind of man to have about. He kicks because things are not as they should be, and he proposes to correct them. The man who growls is merely a negative quality. He may know that things are not going right, but he hasn't any idea of trying to do anything about it. He just sits round and complains.

You remember Mark Twain's story about the kicker and how successful he was in securing everything that belonged to him. He was a producer in the best sense of the word, just as every man who kicks in the right way is certain to be. You probably know just such men—men who are chronic kickers. Let anything go wrong and they go "up in the air" in a minute, but you can depend upon it that that particular thing will never go wrong again if they can prevent it.

A kicker may not be the most agreeable person to have around, yet he is a healthful factor in almost any establishment. He has his faults, but it is possible to overlook them for the sake of the productive value that he represents.

As to the growler—there seems to be no place for him in the work of the world. He may complain loudly and whine and talk about other people, but he remedies no faults, he repairs no leaks—he just makes trouble.

That is the difference between the kicker and the growler.—Business.

"I wound up with that clause," he said, "so possible purchasers would not be scared off by the prospect of an unearthly chattering at 5 o'clock in the morning. Birds can be trained to keep any kind of hours. If they are brought up by a family of nightawks they learn to go to bed at midnight and get up at 9 a. m., along with the rest of the folks; but if they are tucked in right away after supper they wake up the neighborhood at a correspondingly early hour the next morning. It is advisable for any person who is likely to lie abed until noon to inquire into the early training of a bird before buying."—New York Sun.

prison labor, while there's no doubt been a great deal of laudable work done in the way of employing prisoners, yet, Sir, I would like to suggest to the Honorable the Provincial Secretary, the idea of considering carefully not only those whose liberty is restrained and who are confined in our public institutions, but also those who were prior to their incarceration dependent upon them and who possibly suffer more through their confinement than the actual prisoners. Some scheme might be devised which would not only encourage thrift and honesty on the part of those confined, but would also serve to alleviate the suffering of those who formerly depended upon them—if a part at least of the earnings of these prisoners could be sent back to their families.

Technical Education.

The next paragraph of the speech deals with a very important question, which I regret to say, is touched very gingerly and uncertainly—that of technical and industrial education. The reference to this very important subject is as follows:

"The necessity for and the advantages arising out of the adoption of a system of technical and industrial education are becoming more obvious day by day, and you will be asked to make an appropriation for this purpose."

This indeed is handling an extremely important subject in a very non-committal manner. One would gather from this vague reference to the subject that the gray dawn of intelligence is at last striking the Government. With reference to this all-important question, contrast this vague, indefinite, ill-defined and non-committal position, Sir, with the stand taken by this side of the House last year. We, Sir, divided the

Burn Caused Open Sore.

Zam-Buk Worked a Wonderful Cure

Sometimes a bad burn, a deep cut, or some similar injury, sets up a more permanent injury, in the form of an open discharging sore. In such cases Zam-Buk will be found of unequalled value.

Mr. J. Nixon, of 901 William Ave., Winnipeg, blacksmith at the C. P. R. shops, had his foot badly burned by some molten metal falling upon it. He says: "The burn was a very bad one, and after the first few days it left an open sore, which showed marked signs of blood-poisoning. It discharged freely and caused me terrible agony. For three weeks I suffered acutely and could get no ease. At last I obtained a preparation from the doctor, which seemed to stop the discharging and made me quite hopeful, but finally the wound became as bad as ever.

I was then advised to use Zam-Buk, and from the first application the balm gave me relief. The inflammation was thoroughly checked, and the poisonous matter cleared away in a very short time after beginning with Zam-Buk. Healing then began, and in less than two weeks the wound was thoroughly healed."

One of the main lessons of this case lies right here—try Zam-Buk first for any injury, sore, skin disease or wound. It is equally good for piles, blood-poisoning, festering wounds, chaps, cold sores, children's eruptions, scalp sores, varicose ulcers, chilblains, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. You are warned against harmful substitutes and inferior preparations, which yield a bigger margin of profit and are sometimes pushed as being "just as good." Nothing is just as good.

House upon this same question last session. The record appears at p. 244 of the Votes and Proceedings. Our motion was as follows: "That in the opinion of this House the province and the municipalities should unite in (a) the establishment of technical schools in the towns and cities in Ontario to supplement the practical training of the workshop. (b) An arrangement as to the basis of support for such schools as between the province, the municipality and the interested manufacturers. (c) The establishment in the larger industrial centres of technical high schools. (d) That the powers of the municipalities should be enlarged so as to enable them to aid in the support of such work."

This, Sir, was a well-defined scheme, and, had the Government accepted it and appointed a commission to make the necessary inquiry and obtain the necessary information, something practical might be the result in the immediate future. I cannot help thinking, Sir, that if this Government had accepted this suggestion and had sent a commission out to ascertain all facts pertaining to the technical and industrial conditions of this province, the information thus obtained would have fitted in with and would have been supplemental to any information that the report of the Dominion Government commission may contain. The latter commission does well in ascertaining industrial and labor conditions here and elsewhere not only in this country but several other countries; but we, Sir, priding ourselves on being per pupil. It is difficult to figure exactly what the average grant to agricultural colleges per pupil is, although some substantial aid is given; but, Sir, when we come to a very deserving class, the industrial school class, a far different story is told. This province practically says to the lad from thirteen to seventeen years of age who is perforce driven from school to earn a livelihood in the workshop that it has no concern for him, that it has neither moral nor financial obligation with reference to him. Sir, last year we assisted 4,500 odd public and separate school pupils highest hopes with reference to the future. Last year we criticized at length the inequitable and unfair way in which the commission obtained their easements. We have also heretofore dealt with the absolutely tyrannical legislation whereby the votes taken in fourteen municipalities upon one question were made to do service for an entirely different scheme. It will be recalled that by-laws were submitted in some fifteen municipalities in Western Ontario; the question then submitted to the ratepayer was, whether he was willing to pay a certain fixed figure for power delivered by the commission at the gate of his town or city. The ratepayer in that case was not called upon to make any inquiry as to the original cost, or as to the cost of transmission, but had only to decide the very simple question whether power delivered at the door of his municipality at a certain price was cheap power or not. That called for no investigation whatever upon the part of the ratepayers, and these by-laws were carried in some fifteen municipalities. Then, the Government entirely changed its scheme and instead of delivering, at a certain figure, power at the gates of the municipalities in question, it offered to sell power to the municipalities at Niagara at a certain price and to compel the municipalities to stand the cost of building and maintaining transmission lines, etc., let that cost be what it might. This was an entirely different scheme. Our view then was that when the Government and the commission entirely changed its scheme, the new scheme should have been submitted to the municipalities and the ratepayers given the opportunity of saying whether they voted yea or nay on this new scheme. This the Government absolutely refused them, and the vote that was given for one proposition was taken as a test for an entirely different one, and legislation was passed as though they had voted and favored the present scheme. Our contention then was, and now is, that the people should have been trusted and the present scheme should have been submitted to the people of the municipalities for their approval or disapproval.

There is another phase of this question deserving serious consideration, as the matter is being at present worked out, the credit of the whole province is pledged for the benefit of a few municipalities in order that cheap power may be obtained for these municipalities. The absolute unfairness of this plan is better seen if we take specific illustrations of how it works out. For example, Bracebridge the other day held a banquet as a result of the successful opening of their power scheme. What did Bracebridge require to do? Bracebridge was required to submit its scheme to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, a creature of the Government, and when their scheme had been approved of by the Municipal Board, Bracebridge was obliged to sell its own debentures. They sold at 98 1/2, bearing, I think, 4 1/2 per cent. interest. Now, contrast this method of procedure towards obtaining cheap power as, let us say, between Bracebridge and Welland. The province as a whole, Bracebridge included, is compelled to furnish cheap money and cheap power for Welland, but in turn the province as a whole, including Welland, does not endorse Bracebridge, and does not assist Bracebridge in obtaining cheap power. The result is that Bracebridge loses $1.50 per hundred on the sale of its debentures and pays 4 1/2 per cent. interest, whereas Welland loses nothing on the sale, and gets its money at about 3 1/2 per cent.

There can be but one result of this whole scheme if successful; namely, that it will induce intending manufacturers to locate in the Niagara Peninsula rather than in the different towns and cities throughout the Norfolk spoke of the population of Ontario. In that connection, Sir, I desire to raise the question whether we are doing as a province all that might be done to obtain desirable immigrants; whether the province is at all doing its duty towards peopling our Northland? Sir, we know what the result of a vigorous Dominion immigration policy has done for the West, and I think this Government might well take a leaf out of their book and show more initiative, zeal and energy as to the important question of obtaining settlers for the fertile agricultural lands of North Ontario. Sir, this Government in that respect ought to awaken out of its sleep, and ought at once to institute an active propaganda in favor of peopling our own Hinterland. We know something, Sir, of the rapid progress of the West, Calgary, for example, last year boasted a population of 30,000 or 35,000. This year she claims 51,000. Similarly Edmonton's population last year was about 20,000, now it is claimed that it is 30,000. The population of the agricultural lands of that province is increasing in about the same proportion. This Government claims that we have as fertile lands in Northern Ontario as will be found in the West, why then, is not something practical and tangible being done towards securing population.

That Three-Fifths Clause.

I was rather amused with the ideas expressed by the honorable member for South Norfolk with reference to commission may contain. The latter commission does well in ascertaining industrial and labor conditions here and elsewhere not only in this country but several other countries; but we, Sir, priding ourselves on being the banner province of the Dominion, might well have acted upon our own initiative, and as a result of concurrent work ascertained more minutely the requirements of this particular province. Then, Sir, we could have availed ourselves of the work of the Dominion commission and at the same time have had the question from an internal standpoint dealt more exhaustively with by our own commission. As an incidental advantage, the educational effect of a properly selected commission moving from town to town and city to city throughout the province would have been distinctly felt and would have done very much towards crystallizing the views of municipal officers, boards of trade, boards of education, and employers of labor on this extremely important question.

Contrast With Germany.

There is a marked difference between our educational system and that of other countries which have given the question of industrial education serious consideration. Perhaps in this province, considering we are a young country, the school of culture has too much predominated. The marked distinction between our school system and that of Germany, for example, is, that our continuation classes are still entirely scholastic, whereas Germany says to her children:

"I will give you an education sufficient for ordinary life up to the end of your common school course. After that you must begin to think of this as a practical world, and I, the state, will assist you in a practical way, so that you may earn an honest living."

The result is that continuation classes in Germany become continuation industrial schools. Of these there are some 2,200, attended by 350,000 pupils. After a two-year's course in these industrial schools the young man specializes and attends higher technical schools and institutes.

We believe it is the duty of the state to give to the child of the state such education as may hereafter make him the best citizen of the state. It becomes a very grave and important question whether this province might not, whether this province ought not, to give such practical assistance as will enable the youth of the province the better and easier to make a livelihood. My contention is, Sir, that we ought to establish in every industrial centre an "evening industrial school" to supplement the work of the workshop. These schools ought to be of such a general character as to reach out to all the lads in the workshops, and ought not to be confined to those who are fortunate enough to reach a high school or collegiate institute status.

It is a matter of extreme regret that this Government has not taken more active steps, that it has not put itself in a position to take more active steps than it has done, and that the speech from the throne merely says:

"That the necessity is becoming more obvious day by day for a system of technical and industrial education."

Provincial Aid for Schools.

Last year, Sir, I produced figures to show what the province is doing by way of aiding in the education of certain classes of people. I then made clear the fact that the provincial grants to public and separate schools amount annually to $1.38 for each pupil attending the same; the grants to high schools and collegiate institutes to $4.66 per pupil; the grants to normal and model schools amount to $112.43 per pupil; the grants to Toronto University $126.36 from school to earn a livelihood in the workshop that it has no concern for him, that it has neither moral nor financial obligation with reference to him. Sir, last year we assisted 4,500 odd public and separate school pupils at the rate of $1.38 per pupil; we assisted 3,100 odd high school and collegiate institute pupils at the rate of $4.66 per pupil; we assisted 438 normal and model school pupils at the rate of $112.43 per capita; and we assisted 3,950 university students at a rate of $126.00 per pupil. Thus does this province follow from stage to stage those who are financially able to attend our schools and colleges thus to attain a liberal education; but when it comes to the lad whom chill penury at an early age drives to the workshop, the province says to him, we are under no moral or financial responsibility with reference to you and we will make no provision whatever for your further education. I say, Sir, that until some different scheme is properly worked out that will have due regard to the moral and financial responsibility of this province with reference to the industrial classes the educational system of this province will be but ill-balanced and the state will not be doing what it should do for the large number of young men and young women we find in all our industrial centres.

The Hydro-Electric Problem.

Sir, I confess frankly that I have not as much confidence in the successful working out of this scheme as has, apparently, the framer of the speech from the throne. There has been already so much misconduct and mismanagement on the part of the commission as not to justify the money at about 3-1/2 per cent. There can be but one result of this whole scheme if successful; namely, that it will induce intending manufacturers to locate in the Niagara Peninsula rather than in the different towns and cities throughout the province. Nay, Sir, it may go so far as to take away factories already existing in other towns and change them to near the Falls. I leave it with the Government to say whether as representing the whole province they think such a scheme is fair and equitable to the whole province. And this raises the further question whether a uniform flat rate would not be more equitable even within the electric zone.

Reforestation.

I regret that I do not find any reference whatever to a very important subject, perhaps one of the largest question which the Honorable, the Minister of Lands and Forests has to deal with, namely, that of reforestation. I think, Sir, the Government has been sufficiently long in power and the necessity of the conservation of our forests has been put so plainly, and so often, before the Government from this side of the House that the public might now expect a well-defined plan of forest conservation and of reforestation.

Peopling the Northland.

why then, is not something practical and tangible being done towards securing population.

That Three-Fifths Clause.

I was rather amused with the ideas expressed by the honorable member for South Norfolk with reference to local option. He expressed the idea that a grand work had been accomplished for temperance within a certain time past, because of the fact that 242 municipalities had in that time adopted local option; that 556 hotel licenses had been cut off, and 16 shop licenses removed. This under the present law he said was a "splendid result." I would like to ask the honorable gentleman whether he is not falling into the logical fallacy of proving either too little or too much? If it was a splendid thing under the three-fifths clause to have cut off 556 licenses, would it not have been a much more splendid thing to have cut off seven or eight hundred under a majority vote? What says the honorable gentleman? He sits silent, while the ridiculousness and the absurdity of his argument is apparent even to himself. He pledges himself to stand where he has always stood, namely, for the three-fifths clause. We, Sir, on this side of the House have ever stood on safer ground. We have maintained that so long as the vote taken in any particular municipality has no bearing as to results outside of that municipality, that it should be treated as an ordinary municipal vote, and that a majority should rule. Examine the present Act, and see what anomalous and ridiculous results it leads to: In a certain town you have two voters, John Smith and John Brown. John Smith is a local optionist, John Brown is

From Your Druggist: Psychine, the great Vitality-Builder

(PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)

You know what it would mean to us were Psychine a preparation without a definite, beneficial action.

After the first bottle which we would buy, no more would be purchased.

And we would go out of business. But we're not going out of business, and our confidence that we're not is based upon our third of a century's experience with Psychine.

Ten years after Confederation we commenced compounding Psychine.

Since that time, we have sold many millions of bottles.

We have cured many hundreds of thousands of virulent and oftentimes fatal cases of disease.

We have in our files many hundreds of thousands of unsolicited testimonials.

And we have grown from a small beginning to be one of the largest proprietary manufacturers in this country.

Here then is proof that we have in Psychine a preparation with abundant and demonstrated effectiveness, more so than any other preparation we, or anyone else, ever heard of.

Here then is the reason of our unalterable confidence in Psychine, that it is in fact the greatest preparation of its kind in the world.

Here then is why we have inaugurated a policy of actually buying hundreds of thousands of bottles of Psychine to give to those who should use.

To those who are blindly groping in the dark for relief from their misery, who may, perhaps be using wrong methods to recover their health and their strength.

***

LAGRIPPE.

The greatest and most effective agents for the bodily health are the white corpuscles, phagocytes.

These white corpuscles eat any germ of disease that gains an entrance to the body, when they're in large enough numbers and sufficiently strong.

When they're not sufficiently strong, the disease germs devour them and disease holds the body.

***

For centuries almost, herbs, nature's own remedies, have been the most efficient foe to disease.

We have not known very definitely just how.

But now science tells us that certain of these herbs increase the number of the white corpuscles and their strength.

These certain herbs are incorporated in Psychine.

We go to the ends of the earth for these herbs—to Arabia, to South America, to China and to Japan.

They are compounded in the most costly chemical appliances in this country.

And the result is Psychine—for a third of a century the most effective vitality-builder the world has known.

The one preparation that has cured many thousands of the following diseases:

La Grippe	Bronchial Coughs
Bronchitis	Weak Lungs
Hemorrhages	Weak Voice
Sore Throat	Spring Weakness
Anaemia	Early Decline
Female Weakness	Catarrh Affections
Indigestion	Catarrh of Stomach
Poor Appetite	Night Sweats
Chills and Fevers	Obstinate Coughs
Sleeplessness	Laryngitis and
Nervous Troubles	Dyspepsia
After-effects of Fluency, Pneumonia and
La Grippe

Now we don't ask you to take our word for the tremendously beneficial effect of Psychine. Fill out the coupon below, mail it to us and we'll give your druggist an order (for which we pay him the regular retail price) for a 50-cent bottle of Psychine to be given you free of cost.

THE BEST REMEDY

For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleville, Ont.—"I was so weak and worn out from a female weakness that I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took several bottles of it, and I gained strength so rapidly that it seemed to make a new woman of me. I can do as good a day's work as I ever did. I sincerely bless the day that I made up my mind to take your medicine for female weakness, and I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind letters, as I certainly profited by them. I give you permission to publish this any time you wish."—Mrs. ALBERT WICKETT, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will cure female weakness and so successfully carry women through the Change of Life as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ill— inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

HOW TO CARE FOR SILVER.

Too Much Scouring Will Wear Out Plate and Means Needless Work.

While all homemakers take genuine pride in the handsome appearance of their table silver, many find the care of it a burden and give themselves an unnecessary amount of labor over it. The weekly cleaning, which is a bugbear to many housewives, is not only needless, but a real harm, since constant scouring will soon wear off silver plate and has an appreciable effect even upon solid silver. To avoid this it is hoped that the following hints may prove helpful to some housekeepers:

Silver in daily use should be washed as soon as possible after leaving the table, following immediately after the glasses in the process of dishwashing. After a preliminary rinsing to remove loose food lay aside any stained pieces for future care and immerse the rest in a pan of clean, hot soapy water. Wash such pieces as need it with a soft cloth and place them all an anti-local optionist. Prior to the submission for the first time of the local option measure, according to the present law John Brown's vote was worth one-and-a-half times John Smith's. The moment, however, local option is carried, notwithstanding that these same two men are living and voting in the same town under similar conditions the situation is reversed, and John Smith's vote becomes worth one-and-a-half of John Brown's. A law that produces such results would do credit to a sleight-of-hand man, or a Japanese juggler, but it is not at all creditable to a British Legislature. The only sound position to take, Mr. Speaker, is the one I stand upon, namely, "one man, one vote, and every vote of equal value."

HON. MR. MACKAY'S TELLING SPEECH

We have, Sir, divided the House for five successive sessions upon this question, and we will continue to divide it until the true principle of legislation is recognized and adopted. I, Sir, have taken that position, and intend to continue taking that position regardless of who is hit. He would be a mean local optionist who would ask to have the dice loaded in his favor, and he would be just as mean a friend of the trade who would make such a request. I repeat, Sir, that the dice should not be loaded for or against either party. If a municipality desires to adopt local option, the voice of the majority should rule. If, after having had an experience of local option, that municipality desires to return to the license system in preference to local option, again the majority should rule. The people who live under a law for three years, day in and day out, know more about its workings than any Government sitting in Queen's Park, be that Government Liberal or Conservative. Trust the people, and allow the people to deal with the matter fairly.

Education.

In dealing with the Government's attitude with reference to industrial education I pointed out that this Government has practically done nothing along that line. Perhaps, Sir, it is well for industrial education that they should never take the subject up. If no more intelligent direction is given to the movement by the Education Department than it has shown in the dealing with rural school education, I repeat, it may be a blessing if this Government never touches the question at all. Of all the mismanagement that any Department in the known world ever was guilty of, I venture to say that that of the Education Department with reference to our rural schools is the most pronounced. Of all the floundering and blundering and sinning against device ever known, I know nothing to equal that of this Government in the manner in which it has dealt with our rural schools. No Department, Sir, could possibly have been more mischievous as to results than the Education Department of this province. I make that statement deliberately. I make it plainly, with the full sense of the responsibility that the charge implies. When this Government, Sir, proposed to wipe out our model schools we, on this side of the House, gave them fair warning and told them plainly what any intelligent ten-year-old child ought to know, namely, that if they at one stroke wiped out the means of training qualified teachers for our public schools, there must inevitably be a dearth of qualified teachers. After first, Sir, they had determined to abolish the Model Schools, when we found our efforts to save them were unavailing, we next begged of the Premier of this Province, the Honorable the Minister of Education, not to wipe out the model schools at one stroke. We urged that there should at least be a survival of the fittest of them, in order that a supply of properly qualified teachers might be ensured for all our schools. This, Sir, was the burden of our plea. What I have said from session to session upon this subject is well known to honorable gentlemen in this House. They will also recall a plea along this line made by the Hon. Mr. Harcourt and the Hon. Mr. Graham; but, Sir, the Honorable the Minister of Education, seems always absolutely impervious to knowledge. He seems, Sir, unsuspceptible to receiving even a single idea along educational lines. Nothing could or would permeate his thinking faculty. Session after session we pointed out what must be the inevitable result of closing the model schools; we also pointed out what is a known fact, that at least, twenty, possibly thirty per cent. of our normal trained teachers do not remain in Ontario, but go to the western provinces where without any further training, they are qualified to teach. The result is that we have cut off largely the basis of supply of teachers for our rural schools, and are spending Ontario money to train teachers, a very large percentage of whom do not remain within the province. I repeat, Sir, this Government with reference to the rural schools of Ontario sinned against light, sinned against warning, and sinned against knowledge. No class of people in the whole province are more anxious to give the very best education they possibly can to their children than are the farmers of the Province of Ontario; but, Sir, there is a limit beyond which they cannot go. By closing the model schools this Government barred the door to many a poor man's son and daughter from ever entering the teaching profession. This fact is so well known that it needs but to be mentioned to be recognized as truth in every part of Ontario. I say, Sir, the result of the stupid, stubborn, and blundering policy of this Government was absolutely inevitable and was easily discernible in advance. It has led to a deplorable and lamentable state to the large question of reforestation, perhaps the largest the Government has to-day to deal with. I find no indication whatever of the adoption of an aggressive colonization system looking to the peopling of our own northland. Nor do I find any indication of dealing comprehensively and systematically with that all-important question of industrial education. Nor, Sir, do I find any indication of any intention on the part of the Government to take any steps whatever to relieve the serious condition of affairs in which the rural school sections find themselves with reference to teachers. I, for one, Sir, strongly urge upon the Government, in order to supply a sufficient number of teachers to reinstate in the meantime at least the model schools of the province in order that duly qualified teachers may be turned-hed for the rural schools. I stand, Mr. Speaker, where I have always stood on the "three-fifths clause" as to local option. Much credit has been claimed for the Honorable the Provincial Secretary, by the honorable member for South Norfolk with reference to the enforcement of the liquor license law, and he even had the temerity to refer to the enforcement of the law in New Ontario! Doubtless he had in his mind the fiasco of sending Yankee Pinkerton detectives up into that north country, who collected a considerable quantity of liquor, then illegally sold the same, and then prosecuted the purchasers for re-selling! This hollow humbug of pretending to put down the illicit sale of liquor in the north country is becoming a scandal. Every man knows that if one good Canadian official stood on each train of the Government road, by which road alone liquor can be brought in to that north country, he could absolutely stop the traffic; but instead, Sir, the liquor is allowed to go in, and then the province is put to the expense of sending a gang of disreputable detectives up to make a farce of the administration of justice.

Again, Sir, we are told, and the boast is made by Government supporters ad nauseam, that the Attorney-General's Department is, and has been extremely active, because of the isolated fact that years ago they put out of existence a single poolroom. I make the statement boldly. I make it with a full responsibility of the gravity of its nature, when I say that there never was a time in the history of the province when the people of the province had so little faith in the activity, or rather inactivity, of the Attorney-General's Department as now. Never, Sir, since Confederation have

BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so."

WALTER RATHBUN, President. H. B. SHERWOOD, Superintendent. MILES McKEOWN, Despatcher.

every part of Ontario. I say, Sir, the result of the stupid, stubborn, and blundering policy of this Government was absolutely inevitable and was easily discernible in advance. It has led to a deplorable and lamentable state of affairs. We now find twenty per cent. or more of the rural schools in our land in the hands of teachers with absolutely no professional training whatever, and some of them without even a semblance of a non-professional certificate, and this, Sir, is a direct result of the stupidity and stubbornly adopted policy of this Government. As an illustration, Sir, I find in the Public School Report of William E. Tilley, Esquire, Public School Inspector for the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, that there were last year seventy rural school teachers in these united counties, twenty-seven with second-class, twenty-two thirds—mostly renewed, and not less than nineteen schools were being taught by people having no professional training—teaching simply on temporary permits. Now, Sir, contrast this with ten years ago: From the same report I learn that in the year 1900 there were exactly the same number of rural school teachers in these united counties, namely seventy. Of these, two had first-class certificates, twenty-two had second-class, and the remaining forty-six had professional thirds. There was not one single permit in either county in that year. Last year we had not less than nineteen. That, Sir, is a fair average of what we find all over the Province of Ontario, and this is the result of the policy deliberately adopted by this Government in spite of all warning we could possibly give them. In my own riding, Sir, in the early January of last year, there were no less than fifteen rural schools vacant, and the trustees and inspector were busy scurrying hither and thither in an endeavor to secure any person regardless of qualification, to act as a teacher. Complaints come from all over the province along the same lines. This scarcity of teachers is the natural consequence of the closing of the model schools. My arguments years ago was, and now is, that it was far better to have teachers, some of whom may not have had the normal school professional training, than to adopt a system calling for a more expensive training and resulting in the fact that one-third of our schools are in the hands of untrained teachers. I may add, Sir, that I have always had great faith in the work of our model schools; they were in charge of competent and experienced men, men of five, ten, fifteen, and twenty years' actual experience, men who were trained in what is by all odds the best of all universities—the university of actual experience. They were doing efficient and successful work. These schools were easy of access to intending teachers. A poor man's son or daughter was not obliged to leave home and reside for a year in one of our cities to obtain professional training. Instead, however, Sir, of continuing these model schools until at least a sufficient number of teachers were guaranteed for the province, practically all the model schools in Old Ontario were closed, with the deplorable results already referred to. The net result is that the cost of education in the rural districts is increased fifty or seventy-five per cent., and on the average the character, and quality of the teaching is far lower than it was ten years ago.

Summary.

Now, Sir, I have dealt in a cursory way with the leading subjects which are either mentioned in, or omitted from, the speech from the throne. I regret to say that I find in the speech no guarantee, nay, Sir, not even an gravity of its nature, when I say that there never was a time in the history of the province when the people of the province had so little faith in the activity, or rather inactivity, of the Attorney-General's Department as now. Never, Sir, since Confederation have there been so many absolute miscarriages of justice, and never have so many scoundrels gone unwhipped of justice as during the past five years. I do not purpose entering into details, they are familiar to the public—the Orangeville affair, the Kinrade inquiry, and others, furnish striking illustrations. The Department seems to be absolutely overcome with inertia. How well, Sir, we all recall the boast of the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer, during the session of 1906, that this Government had actually raised the standard of the administration of justice. "The King's writ now runs," throughout the province, shouted this distinguished gentleman. Sir, the general public are strongly of the opinion that it is the other fellows that are allowed to do the running, while the King's writ, under the direction of the Attorney-General's Department, lags lamely on the stage of action. And yet, Sir, the mover and seconder shout "Behold this great Government." The honorable member for South Norfolk went so far in his adulation as to say "there never was a Government like ours in the world." Sir, let me assure him that for once I unreservedly accept his statement. Unfortunately for this province his statement is entirely too true.

Now, Sir, pursuing the course adopted last year, this debate has been somewhat curtailed. The House will not now be divided, but later during the session, on all these and other issues, honorable gentlemen of this House will have not only an opportunity for discussion, but of sitting and taking notice while the Division Bell rings.

ONTARIO'S POLITICAL LEADERS.

(From The Globe, Jan. 27th.)

The opposing leaders in the Legislature made their declarations of policy in concluding the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne. It is in these contests that the keen, insight, sound judgment, and statesmanlike grasp of the Opposition leader become most clearly apparent, and his incisive strength as a debater has a most telling effect. He was fully conscious of the seriousness of his words when emphasizing the loss of public confidence in the Attorney-General's Department and the pernicious influence of the easy escape of malefactors.

The opposing policies as to technical education were brought into clear contrast, although Sir James urged the need of waiting for the finding of the commission. The fact that nothing is done for the children who at twelve, thirteen, or fourteen years of age must leave school for apprenticeships was condemned in the strongest terms by Hon. Mr. MacKay. Industrial continuation classes for these boys and girls would sustain their mental development, perfect them in their chosen work, and make them more useful members of society. This form of technical education would not provoke the antagonism of workmen suffering through competition for employment, and would not deprive children of the full benefit of mental training during their school years. The full persuasive effect of the Opposition leader's logic was felt in behalf of the class of children most in need of technical training.

In educational affairs, as in other important functions of Provincial government, he showed not only a thorough familiarity with administrative principles and details, but with the results of various lines of policy on the public directly affected. The closing of model schools and the great expense entailed on prospective teachers had produced a system not at all responsive to the needs of the Province. As a result it was impossible to obtain a supply of competent teachers. Turning to the complete omissions of the speech from the throne, Hon. Mr. MacKay dealt with the continued absence of any attempt to form a reforesting policy and the lack of a system of colonization for New Ontario. The House was unusually attentive during the Opposition leader's address, but it is in the Province at large that such reviews of public affairs have lasting effect.

Sir James v a vigorous and determined as usual, and happy in the general good fortune enjoyed by the Province. His continued tendency to revert to ancient political history suggested that, as was said of an American statesman, his future is mainly behind him. Economic reasoning has never been his specialty. When he said the Province got nothing and the Dominion much in taxation from immigrants he was innocent of the fact that they pay indirectly their share of the supplementary revenue tax on many corporations, and the scarcity value given to some of the assets of the Province by increases in population. Sir James defended the three-fifths clause against Hon. Mr. MacKay's demand for the British system of majority rule, and dwelt on the favorable features of Provincial development with vigorous emphasis. The two speeches, commendably brief, weighed the opposing leaders in the balance. Alike in sincerity, in courage, in determination, and in confidence, the Opposition leader showed clearly superior in economic understanding, in comprehension of public needs, and in appreciation of the subservience of Governmental institutions to the people for whom they exist.

CURIOUS EFFECT OF COLD.

Many Substances at Very Low Temperature Become Luminous.

At about 300 degrees below zero or thereabout almost everything becomes phosphorescent, or, in other words, shines in the dark after being exposed to an intense light.

Even the air itself is phosphorescent at such a temperature, but curiously enough a slight impurity in the air experimented with destroys its phosphorescent property. If a perforated handkerchief is shaken in a room, for instance, and air from that room is then inclosed in a tube and its temperature is lowered to the required degree no phosphorescence appears. The air must be filtered and thus freed from organic substances and with hydrogen in order that the phenomena of phosphorescence and of fluorescence, which is

The Doctor's Question.

Much Sickness Due to Bowel Disorders.

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient is, "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that 98% of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver, and that this condition must be removed gently and thoroughly before health can be restored.

Rexall Orderlies are a positive, pleasant and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of their great curative value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case when they fail to produce entire satisfaction.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly, and have a soothing, strengthening, healing influence on the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge, gripe, cause nausea, flatulence, excessive looseness, diarrhoea or other annoying effect. They are especially good for children, weak persons or old folks. Two sizes, 25c and 10c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. T. B. Wallace, Druggist.

room, for instance, and air from the room is then inclosed in a tube and its temperature is lowered to the required degree no phosphorescence appears. The air must be filtered, and thus freed from organic substances and from hydrogen in order that the phenomena of phosphorescence and of fluorescence, which is akin to it, may be produced.

Among the substances that have been rendered phosphorescent at low temperatures are ivory, horn, eggs, gelatine, india rubber, cotton, tortoise shell and certain flowers.

The metals also exhibit phosphorescence, but it is thought that this is due to an organic layer on their surface, because when they have been scorched they lose their phosphorescent power.

Experience seems to indicate that the more complex the chemical constitution of a body is the more intense is its phosphorescence. The reason suggested for this is that the structure of a complex body offers special facilities for the absorption of the vibrations of light.

In fact, experiments within the last few years have shown so many surprising results that highly important questions as to the nature of matter and the constitution of the universe have begun to be based upon them. It has been asked, for instance, whether some of the stars which we have regarded as fiercely blazing suns may not in fact owe their luminosity to the phosphorescence arising from a low temperature.

American Golf.

Certainly you are in good luck as a golfer if you go to America at all, for they are gloriously hospitable in that land, and, so far as I could see, the idea that some have here—that the American's notion of the object of playing a game is purely to win it, not to enjoy the playing—is perfectly mistaken. I never had the impression more strongly anywhere of being in the company of men who were playing the game for pleasure, not for the mere sake of winning the match. But then it is certainly true, as I heard one of their judges (I mean a legal judge, though he was a judge of golf, too) say in an after dinner speech that it is "the cleanest sport in America."—Horace Hutchinson in London Telegraph.

CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

NOW IN PERFECT HEALTH
THANKS TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 1st, 1910.
"I am well acquainted with a man, known to thousands in Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster, who for nearly a year was practically a cripple from Rheumatism. He was so troubled with the disease that it was difficult to even turn over in bed. His heart appeared so weak that he could hardly walk up stairs.

Last June, he received a sample of "Fruit-a-tives". He used them and dates his recovery from that time. To-day, there is no man in Vancouver enjoying better health.

He was building a house this fall and shingled a good part of the roof in a driving rain, without suffering any bad effects."

DESERONTO.

A large congregation convened in the church of the Redeemer, Deseronto, on Tuesday evening, Feb. 7th, to witness the induction of Rev. F. S. Dowling, their new pastor. Rev. A. H. Drumms, of Belleville, interim moderator, presided and conducted the opening exercises; Rev. Dr. Howard, of Napanee, preached a suitable sermon, after which Rev. W. T. Wilkins, Presbytery clerk, narrated the steps taken to fill the vacancy. Mr. Dowling was then solemnly and impressively inducted and cordially welcomed by the members of the presbytery; Rev. J. A. Shaver, of Picton, addressed the pastor, and Rev. A. H. Drumm, the people, both addresses being eminently practical and earnest. The musical part of the service was very attractive, the local choir being assisted by several members of the choir of St. Andrew's church, Kingston. Solos were beautifully contributed by Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Arthur Craig, Miss Bell and Arthur Craig, Miss Hall, of Napanee, being organist on the occasion.

An adjournment was then made to the lecture room, where a reception was held, and refreshments served by the ladies of the congregation. G. W. Wright was called to the chair, and directed the proceedings. Rev. Mr. Creegan, the Anglican rector, of Tyendinaga, and Rev. G. H. Copeland, pastor of the Methodist church, in very happy speeches welcomed Mr. Dowling as a fellow worker. S. Russel, of Belleville, was also called upon for a speech. The Kingston vocalists contributed solos which were rapturously applauded, and on motion of Thomas Donnelly and W. J. McMicking, were tendered a vote of thanks. Finally Mr. Dowling closed with an address which showed that the congregation had made an excellent choice. He made a splendid impression on all present. Members of Presbytery all agreed that they had never been present at a more pleasing induction service. Visiting clergymen and others were very hospitably entertained by H. Mc. M. Rathbun and other members of the congregation.

Waiter's Idiosyncrasy.

"If madame would like a special dish that is especially good I would recommend venison stew with noodles," said the waiter.

Madame said very well, she would try venison stew with noodles.

"Why," said the man, "you hate noodles."

"I know," she sighed, "but I would rather eat something I hate than to make that waiter hate me. I expect to eat here again, often. Maybe he will wait on me. I can't afford to make him hate me. But he would hate me if I should decline venison stew with noodles. That is the way of waiters. They always hate people who refuse dishes they recommend, and every chance they get they take revenge."

Low Church—and Salary.

"It must be understood," said the vestryman, who was extremely "low church," to the new rector, "that the rector here shall have no surplice!" "Gracious!" exclaimed the Rev. Mr. Newcome. "How could one have a surplice on the salary you offer?"

Wealth.

"It isn't what a man earns that makes him rich," mused the philosopher.

"No," agreed his friend; "it's usually what his father saved."

"Why do you keep announcing that you are to be married to an heiress? Does it gratify your vanity?"

"No," replied Baron Fucash, "but it cheats my creditors."

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

ON THE VERGE OF A BREAKDOWN

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the Only
Hope for Weakened Nervous
People

This warning will be read by thousands of people who only just succeed in getting through the day's work without a breakdown. If you feel always tired out, have but little appetite, and a poor digestion, cannot sleep well, suffer from headaches, backaches and nervousness, it may mean that you are on the verge of a serious breakdown.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure weak, nervous, troubled men and women because of their direct action on the blood. Every dose of these Pills helps to make new, rich blood, which tones the vital organs, strengthens the nerves and brings renewed health and strength. Mr. Geo. Johnson, of Lequille, N. S., suffered for some years as a result of overwork and strain, but found no help for his condition until he began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Johnson says:—"While working on a railway handling heavy ties I hurt my back and had to give up work. Later I was able to do light work, but for about six years I suffered from dreadful pains in the back and down my legs. This condition became aggravated by indigestion and chronic constipation, and my life was one of constant misery. During those years I was treated by different doctors, but did not get any help. One day a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and proved his faith in them by presenting me with a box. It was more to please him than from any belief that they would be of service to me that I began taking the Pills. Before the box was finished, however, they seemed to be helping me; the pains in my back and legs grew less intense and the bloating in my stomach, caused by the indigestion, disappeared. I continued taking the Pills until I had used over a dozen boxes, when I found myself fully restored to my former health. I am now able to do heavy farm work, and for the past year have not lost a day, or had the least symptom of my former troubles, and I attribute it entirely to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE; OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER V.—(Cont'd)

After that the walk home was delightful; no further mention was made of the man who had insulted and frightened her, or of the lock-et, though Darnley had not forgotten it; and the sky above was not clearer than Nancy's mind when she re-entered Ripstone Hall, not even aware of fatigue, heat, or discomfort in any shape or form.

A very smart—rather too smart—dog-cart was waiting outside the great entrance when they arrived. Derrick Darnley frowned slightly as he said:

"The millionaire has lost no time. Mr. Crawshaw is here, I see."

Nancy smiled.

"Aren't you jealous?" she asked, with a little laugh, as she threw off her hat.

"Do you care about money?" was the young man's reply, put abruptly and questioningly.

"I adore it!" she laughed back, and then the laugh died away, and a startled, fearful look came in her eyes.

"Who—who is that speaking?" she asked, hurriedly.

"Those refined accents," Derrick Darnley replied, carelessly—he was bending over one of the many dogs that came to greet him—"belong to Mr. Crawshaw, or, to give him his full title, Mr. Thomas Moss Crawshaw, late timber foreman, of the East End, London, but now owner of several estates, and occupier of the Manor House, situated about two miles from here."

CHAPTER VI.

"Oh, there you are, Derry—back already—and what have you done with Nancy, pray?"

There was a decided touch of peevishness in Dorothy Leicester's pretty voice.

Darnley was silent for a moment; he had been standing staring up at the broad staircase in a fixed, almost vexed way, when his cousin came out of the large drawing-room and put the above query to him.

He woke from his reverie with a start and looked down at Dorothy. "Miss Hamilton is in her own room, I believe," he answered, in a curiously short manner.

"In her room; then I expect she is tired out, and no wonder, starting off to walk to the village in this heat. I mean to scold her well. Are you going in to say 'How d'ye do' to the great millionaire, Derry? You know it is your duty to pay court to all his wealth."

Dorothy's face had lost its cloud, and was as sunny and lovely as usual; she had been a little vexed that Derrick should have left her to go after Nancy; but now he was back again, and that was all she asked. Had she been a little less occupied with her own feelings on this subject, she must have noticed as she does!" he cried, impatiently, to himself; "is it not sufficient that I should have been foolish enough to have been bewitched by her face the very instant I saw it—that in one moment she should have scattered all my prudence and worldly wisdom to the four winds, without worrying myself over every little thing concerning her, as I have done these last two days! Would any man in his senses do as I am doing!"

He pulled a low easy garden chair close to him and flung himself into it.

"I'll have a smoke, it will clear my brain; I want to see into this matter rightly; I won't condemn her too quickly!"

So saying, he pulled out his silver case—a gift from Dorothy—and, having lit a cigar, he folded his arms and began to think.

Soothed by the fumes of the fragrant weed, his mood softened, and Nancy's face, with those wonderful eyes and tremulous, sweet red lips, returned to haunt, fascinate and torment him.

"Hang it all!" he mentally declared, with a sudden determination born of a variety of feelings, "I am a brute to judge the child so harshly; so much for my great theory of never going on anything like circumstantial evidence, when at the merest, the vaguest cause, I immediately begin to imagine all sorts of things. Now, why should I doubt her about that locket? What earthly connection can the dainty, beautiful, refined, intellectual—in every sense a thorough lady—what connection can she have with such creatures as this man whom she refused to let me follow and thrash—to-day? And why should she not treasure a little gold locket if she likes?"

He took his hat off, flung it away, and rumbled his dark, curly locks, his face growing shadowed and uneasy again.

"I wish, though, she had let me get at that fellow. I would have given him something to remember this day by. She seemed as if she feared to let me go after him. By Jove! I—if—" A flush rose to his face, and a smile came unconsciously to his lips, making him almost handsome in that moment. "What if she were nervous about me?" Then he frowned. "Pooh—bah! conceived ape that I am, why should she care about me? She has only known me about three days altogether, and doubtless doesn't desire to extend the acquaintanceship."

He flicked away his cigar ash rather moodily; but his thoughts soon went back to Nancy, and his heart beat in a strange, quick way, while his pulses thrilled as he remembered how she had clung to him in her fear, and how tempting and exquisite her face had seemed to him as wondering in a blank, vague sort of way if her happiness and contentment had gone for ever, and what lay for her in the future, now that Thomas Moss had crossed her path again.

"It is like some hideous dream! Ah! I was right when I told myself I was too happy; yet, though I feared something might come to trouble me, I never thought of this—I never thought that he could come into this life, mix in this world, and now he has come, not quietly, but loudly and ostentatiously. Why has not Dr. Granley told me about this? If I had been warned, I might—" but there Nancy stopped. Warned or no, the discomfort, the horror of meeting this man would have been just the same. She sighed a little, then sat down and thought it all out in her cool, commonsense way. "After all," she mused, "things are so changed that it may not be so bad. Thomas Moss, foreman of Yorrick's timber yard, is a very different creature from Thomas Moss Crawshaw, Esq., millionaire and great matrimonial catch"—her face lightened visibly. "Of course, he will consider me very much his inferior, doubtless in his heart he will rejoice that he escaped the folly of marrying me when he can now take a wife from any poor, aristocratic family he chooses; yes, yes, how silly I was; the difficulty will be infinitesimal"—the color had come back to Nancy's cheeks, the light to those marvellous eyes. "When all is said and done, he can only regard me as a poor dependent on Sir Humphrey's love and generosity, and so quite beneath the great Mr. Crawshaw's notice. Besides, I am safe now; if—if he should try to remind me of the past, I have one who will protect me now and always."

AS GOOD AS HAVING A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

That is what thousands of mothers say of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets promptly and surely cure all the minor ills of babyhood and childhood, and what is more they are absolutely safe—they have never been known to harm the youngest baby—they never will harm anyone—they are good for babies of all ages. Concerning them Mrs. Wm. Higgins, Karn, Ont., writes:—"I shall never be without Baby's Own Tablets in the house as long as my children are small. They are a wonderful medicine and are as good as having a doctor in the house. I gave them to my little boy for colic and they quickly cured him. I am always glad to recommend them to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dorothy's face had lost its glow, and was as sunny and lovely as usual; she had been a little vexed that Derrick should have left her to go after Nancy; but now he was back again, and that was all she asked. Had she been a little less occupied with her own feelings on this subject, she must have noticed that Mr. Darnley was in anything but a pleasant humor.

"Mr. Crawshaw is quite prepared to receive any amount of homage, so come along," she laughed, slipping her dainty hand through his arm, and trying to pull him toward the drawing-room, whence issued sounds of a strong, loud voice, holding forth with much consequence and vigor.

Darnley's brows contracted in a frown.

"Many thanks, but I would rather be excused, Dolly," he said, curtly. "I have had one experience of Mr. Crawshaw and I am in no hurry to have a second. I think I will go and rescue Merefield from the cubs, he must have had about enough of them by now."

"You have only to utter the magical words, 'Crawshaw is here!' and Merefield will be free immediately," Dorothy observed, with a slight sneer, and then she gave an impatient little sigh.

"I should like to go with you," she said, "but I must remember my duty as hostess and return to my very unwelcome guest."

Darnley pulled a broad tennis hat low over his eyes, and, with a short whistle to the dogs, set off across the lawn towards the tennis ground.

He was both surprised and annoyed.

Why had Nancy suddenly flown away up the stairs, vanishing before he had time to draw breath, when she discovered that Crawshaw was in the house?

Darnley had been bending over the dogs, dispensing pats of welcome all round, and he had not seen the change that had come over the girl's laughing, happy face, nor the expression of something akin to agony which had flashed into her eyes. He had not seen the sudden terror: the exquisite fear, which had overwhelmed her at the intelligence that her dreaded foe was not only actually close at hand, but would be near her every day to torment and trouble her.

All that Darnley had seen was her hasty rush up the stairs, with an eagerness that as he remembered it sent a curious pang to his heart, which grew deeper and deeper as he walked across the grounds.

"My judgment has been utterly at fault, it seems," he said, bitterly, to himself, kicking savagely at a little daisy that was rearing its innocent and pretty head to greet the summer sun, "and she is no better than the rest. What was that she said just now, 'I adore money'! She said it laughingly, but it was the truth she uttered, all the same. Money!—money!—money!—and this brute, because he can boast of a gigantic banking account, is set up and worshipped!"

He turned aside moodily as he neared the tennis court, forgetful of poor Lord Merefield, who was almost reduced to a bundle of rags from the affectionate vigor of his partner, the Hon. Ella, and, reaching a shady and lonely corner, flung himself on the grass and gave way to his thoughts.

"Why do I let this girl vex me

He flicked away his cigar ash rather moodily; but his thoughts soon went back to Nancy, and his heart beat in a strange, quick way, while his pulses thrilled as he remembered how she had clung to him in her fear, and how tempting and exquisite her face had seemed to him as she gradually grew calm and her smiles came again.

Look whichever side he would Nancy's face haunted him; if he shut his eyes, she laughed out of the darkness.

"She is a witch!" Darnley cried, suddenly, to himself; "she has charmed me."

He gave himself up to the enthrallment of this conclusion, and gradually became quiet and contented.

"She is an angel," was his next verdict, as he leisurely finished his cigar; "and as for her thinking about money and that brute, Crawshaw, even for an instant, why the whole thing is a disgraceful libel, and I ought to feel ashamed of myself for letting it come into my mind for a single instant. How proud she is!" was his next thought.

"She disowns the Hamiltons. Serve them right, too, if they could turn their backs on her when she needed them. They ought to feel that she despises them now, that she will never need their help. Thank Heaven that she will never come to want them now. How happy she is! Her face is like a flower bathed in perpetual sunshine; it is the reflection of her mind. Who could help loving her? It is no wonder Dorothy has not grown tired of her, for she is as sweet and rare as she is beautiful!"

And here his rhapsodical musings were broken by the arrival of Lord Merefield in a very bad temper.

"You are a nice fellow, Derry," he commenced, flinging himself on the grass, viciously. "I think you might have given me a hand."

"You have four such able ones near in those possessed by Misses Maude and Ella, that I don't think you can have needed mine."

Darnley lit another cigarette, and smiled while the young earl vented his feelings freely on his friend.

"I believe they would have gone on playing till doomsday if Fairfax hadn't suddenly espied Crawshaw about to depart, and the cubs, of course, fled to greet him. I hope to goodness he will carry one of them off—the two together are too much for me!"

"See what it is to have a coronet at your back," laughed the other man.

"The coronet may go down to the bottom of the sea, for all I care!" observed Lord Merefield, gloomily; then, with an assumption of indifference, "What have you done with Dolly?"

"Oh, we parted company hours ago. I fancy she is with the millionaire. Are you going in? Take care, Merefield, the cubs may seize you again."

But Lord Merefield was out of earshot, and Darnley laughed softly to himself.

"What a case that is; poor boy, certainly love is not altogether a paradise to him."

And then, left alone in the cool, soothed by the fragrant scent of his tobacco, he gave himself up to his thoughts of Nancy and her fascinations; while she, up in the seclusion of her dainty bedroom, was standing gazing out of the window, about expensive clocks," said Argonaut, "but it's a fact that I have got a cheap clock at home that I bought twenty years ago, placed on the mantleshaft, wound and set right, and from that day to this it has never varied so much as one minute."

"Indeed!" "Wonderful!" "Amazing!" came from the auditors of this remarkable statement.

"Do you mean really to say," asked one of them, "that the clock has never varied a minute all these years?"

"Not a minute," returned Argonaut. "The fact is I broke the mainspring in winding it, and it's never done a tick ever since."

The Pill that Leads Them All.—Pills are the most portable and compact of all medicines, and when easy to take are the most acceptable of preparations. But they must attest their power to be popular. As Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the most popular of all pills they must fully meet all requirements. Accurately compounded and composed of ingredients proven to be effective in regulating the digestive organs, there is no surer medicine to be had anywhere.

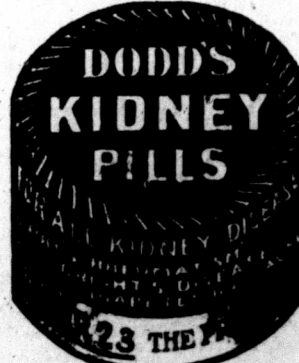

"What is the meaning of this, sir?" inquired an employer sternly. "Asleep at your desk before midday?" "I—I'm extremely sorry, sir," answered the offending clerk, "but my baby has kept me awake all night." "Indeed! Then you had better bring the child here to-morrow, and perhaps it will keep you awake during the day, too!"

"The meanest man I ever knew," said Mark Twain, "lived in Hannibal. He sold his son-in-law the half of a very fine cow, and then refused to share the milk with the young fellow on the ground that he had only sold him the front half. The son-in-law was also compelled to provide all the cow's fodder and to carry water to her twice a day. Finally, the cow butted the old man through a barbed-wire fence, and he sued his son-in-law for damages!"

STILL ANOTHER POSTMASTER TELLS

WHY HE PINS HIS FAITH TO DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Doctors failed to cure his Bright's Disease, but he found relief in the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Olam Point, Shelburne Co., N. S., Jan. 30 (Special).—Joshua Nickerson, postmaster here, is among the many in this neighborhood who tell of pains relieved and disease banished by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I am sixty-two years old," says the postmaster, "And I'll tell you why I think so highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Owing to a bad cold my Kidneys commenced to bother me, and the trouble developed into Backache, stiffness of the joints, and finally Bright's Disease.

"I was treated by a doctor, but that did not help me much, and it was six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills that brought me relief."

Everywhere you go in Canada people tell you of the great work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing, and everyone who tells you can give the reason why. That reason simply is that there is no case of Kidney Disease Dodd's Kidney Pills cannot cure. These people have tried them and proved this true. Backache, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Diabetes, Lumbago, Heart Disease and Bright's Disease are some of the more serious troubles that Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure, simply because these are all either Kidney diseases or are caused by diseased Kidneys.

FIENDISH STEPMOTHER

Burnt Child's Tongue With Red-hot Spoon.

More details of forceful acts of cruelty were given at the South-Western Police Court in London, England, recently, when Arthur and Ethel Rankin were again remanded on the charge of ill-treating the eleven-year-old daughter of the former.

It was alleged that the stepmother:

Fractured both the child's arms by twisting them.

Pressed a hot flat-iron against her hands.

Stamped on her toes until a nail was destroyed.

Burnt her tongue with a red-hot spoon.

Turned her finger-ends over until the blood came.

Beat her with a copper-stick and other articles.

"She made me put my tongue out," said the little girl, "and struck me under the chin. The state of my fingers was caused by the way in which she pressed them on the table. I told the inspector that I ran into the park and beat myself until I was bruised. Mother told me to say that."

Dr. J. J. Douglas described many bruises and abrasions which he found on the child's body and limbs.

Dr. H. A. Eccles stated that the right elbow was fixed in a bent

CANARIES WERE VACCINATED

Nothing is too small for the attention of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, provided it is connected in any way with infection. It appears that the canary suffers from a sort of marsh fever, communicated to it by an insect known as the codex. Dr. Roux, head of the institute, has told the Academy of Science that the bacillus of this fever has been isolated and a serum made to inoculate other canaries. Canaries vaccinated with this serum proved comparatively immune against the attacks of the codex, while non-inoculated birds suffered severely when attacked.

BURNS CAUSED OPEN SORE.

Zam-Buk Worked a Wonderful Cure

Mr. J. Nixon, of 901 William Ave., Winnipeg, a blacksmith at the C.P.R. shops, had his foot badly burned by some molten metal falling upon it. He says: "The burn was a very bad one, and after the first few days it left an open sore, which showed marked signs of blood-poisoning. It discharged freely and caused me terrible agony. For three weeks I suffered acutely and could get no ease. At last I obtained a preparation from the doctor, which seemed to stop the discharging and made me quite hopeful, but finally the wound became as bad as ever.

"I was then advised to use Zam-Buk, and from the first application the balm gave me relief. The inflammation was thoroughly checked, and the poisonous matter cleared away in a very short time after beginning with Zam-Buk. Healing then began, and in less than two weeks the wound was healed.

Zam-Buk is equally good for piles, blood-poisoning, festering wounds, chaps, cold sores, children's eruptions, scalp sores, varicose ulcers, chilblains, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. "I hear you are going to Australia with your husband, Jane," said the mistress. "Aren't you nervous about the long voyage?" "Well, ma'am," said Jane calmly, "that's his look-out. I belong to him now, and if anything happens to me it'll be his loss, not mine."

The publisher of the best Farmer's paper in the Maritime Provinces in writing to us states:

THE TWENTY-ONE RULE.

Old Jacob Weatherly is a man of extreme regularity, and on the principle that "Early to bed," etc., is the best guiding rule for a household he insists that everyone under his roof and authority shall retire at 9.30. As may be readily understood, this rule sometimes proved irksome to the younger members of the family, especially Charles.

Recently, however, Charles reached man's estate, and on his birthday Jacob gave him his blessing.

"I have no longer any authority over you," he said; "now that you are twenty-one you must act as pleases you best."

On the following Saturday evening, therefore, Charles returned home at 11.15 p.m. and rapped at the door.

"Who's that?" said Jacob, from the window.

"Charles," replied his son.

"But why do you come home at this hour? Don't you know we lock up at 9.30?"

"Yes," remonstrated the youth; "but I'm gone twenty-one now and can do as I please."

"Quite so," said the old man; "but so can I."

And the window went down with a bang, and Charles was left to face the stark fact that twenty-one worked two days.

SIKHS' WONDERFUL TEMPLE

SHRINE TO WHICH PILGRIM-AGES ARE MADE.

Come From All Parts of India to Worship and Lay Offerings
in the Temple.

The Golden Temple Amritsar may be called the Mecca of the Sikhs, says the Gentlewoman. What a pilgrimage to Mecca is to the devout Mohammedan a pilgrimage to the Golden Temple, Amritsar, is to the devout follower of the ten guides of the Sikh religion.

Sikhs come from all parts of India to worship and lay their offerings in the temple, and also to be purified by bathing in the tank of sacred water which surrounds the temple. The name Amritsar means "Pool of Immortality," so called because of the sacred pool which lies round the temple.

The image of the temple is clearly reflected in the water which lie round it. It is built on an island with a marble bridge or causeway leading to it. We presently find ourselves in a large square court paved with black and white marble. This court is coming to and from the temple. Sellers of grain, roses, marigolds, and jasmine are sitting about the court with their baskets containing their wares in front of them ready to sell to the pious devotees going to the temple, who take these things as offerings to strew before the Granth Sahib or sacred book of the Sikh scriptures.

The way to the temple from this court lies through massive beautifully carved doors, the panels of which are covered with a sheeting of beaten silver. The gates are guarded by a tall and warlike Sikh, holding his silver mace of office. We walk along the marble causeway leading from the doors direct to the temple.

When we get near the temple we see with what exquisite detail it is built. It is richly ornamented with mosaics and inlaid work of jade, porphyry and pearl. The inlaid work represents flowers, fish, birds and various animals all perfectly designed and portrayed. The marble pavement at our feet is also covered with inlaid work.

We enter the temple through a low carved doorway. On a sort of raised altar lies.

THE GRANTH SAHIB.

The book is carefully swathed in silks and velvets, over it stretches a large velvet canopy, under which the priests are seated busy chanting the Sikh scriptures and receiving offerings from the faithful (especially busy doing the last).

The chanting makes a monotonous din, kept up with a drum constantly beating accompaniment, and it is all in honor of the sacred book, to which great reverence is paid. It is actually put to bed every night, when it is carried in solemn procession by the priests to the treasury in the court. In the treasury are kept the swords and battle-axes, knives, spears and shields of the Sikhs, who are an eminently

THE MANUFACTURE OF STEEL NO ALTERATION IN MEXICO

INFLUENCE OF VANADIUM
UPON IRON.

Making Steel is Worth More to the World Than Making
Gold.

In the days of the mediaeval alchemists it was believed that it was possible by means of some undiscovered laboratory operation to convert the baser metals into gold. With the development of modern chemistry this belief was shown to be baseless, at least in the sense in which the older workers held it, says Cassier's Magazine.

At the same time there has been evolved as a result of the work of the more recent chemists and metallurgists a transmutation in the properties of that most widely used material which is of far more real value to the world than any formula for making gold could ever be.

The discovery that iron containing a certain proportion of carbon constituted steel transformed society and created modern civilization; without steel we should relapse into barbarism. To-day it is known that in addition to carbon there are other elements the addition of which will impart to steel certain properties its value as a material of construction and of operation.

Among the substances which were formerly classed as the "rare" elements there are several which were rare only because there was not sufficient use for them to provide an incentive to discover natural sources of supply.

Thus vanadium, known as an element for a hundred years, estimated as having a value many times that of gold and used solely for a few artistic purposes in coloring fabrics, has within a few years risen immensely in importance because of the knowledge which has been acquired of the valuable properties which it imparts to steel, while at the same time it has fallen in cost to a point about one-half that of silver because the very demand has revealed hitherto unknown deposits.

The influence of vanadium upon steel may well be regarded as a triumph of modern metallurgy, and has become one of the most important of the so-called alloy steels. The older steels, now known broadly as "carbon" steels in distinction to the various alloy steels, had certain fairly well ascertained properties together with determinate limitations.

They could be made ductile within certain limits of strength or strong within certain approach to brittleness, but when both strength and toughness were demanded it was realized that something else in addition to carbon was essential. That something has been shown to be vanadium.

The influence of the addition of small proportions of vanadium to steel is two-fold; it acts as a scavenger, removing oxides, nitrides, &c., in a form easily carried away to the slag, and it also toughens

THE WORLD'S MOST CONSERVATIVE COUNTRY.

Habits and Customs of the People
Have not Yet Changed in Centuries.

Mexico is the graveyard of modernity—the most un-American country in all America. It has been stated that Mexico B.C. and Mexico A.D. are practically one and the same thing, and certainly there is a great deal in Mr. W. E. Carson's "Mexico" to bear out this assertion. All Mexicans are slaves of habit. If anything is not customary it cannot be right or worth considering. Thus, if a servant were asked to sweep the floor when her usual duty was to cook, she would politely refuse, with the phrase, "No es costumbre" (It is not the custom). You order a chop at a restaurant, with soup to precede it, and the soup comes half an hour after the chop. You complain, and on your next visit to the restaurant, you order both courses to be served together. But the waiters resolutely refuse. "No señor," they say politely, "no es costumbre."

AN EDITORIAL MAXIM.

If you are in a hurry to catch a train, and implore the waiter to be quick, he puts his thumb and forefinger gingerly together and says, "Un momento, señor," as if a moment were a fragile piece of spun glass, and he was afraid of breaking it. Then the swarthy villain strolls off and disappears for nearly an hour. That is costumbre.

It is this spirit of conservatism, too, which has retarded the education of the lower classes, and very few of the poorer people in Mexico can either read or write. Thus it is that the "public newspaper reader" is enabled to earn a living in the land where the flowers are without perfume by making the rounds of the drinking places, and reciting the news of the day. A certain amount of literary skill is required to follow this strange calling successfully, and the reader is, in fact, a sort of peripatetic news-editor, for he selects only two or three items which he knows will please his audience.

Yet even the newspapers themselves show a great lack of enterprise, and in the smaller towns editors rarely publish any bright local news, and never hesitate to publish intelligence at least a week old. An amusing reason for this was given by the editor of one of these Mexican products of modern journalism. "Good news," he said, "is like good wine. It improves with age. It is always better to hold news over for a week. If it is true, we shall get more facts and if it proves to be false why should we print it?"

"GOODS AT THE CUT PRICE.

Sometimes, however, the Mexicans do attempt to be up to date, and certain departmental stores make desperate endeavors to copy the go-ahead style of the twentieth-century Yankee.

Plastered over the windows are such appeals as "Ojo, gran garata, ojo" (Look at the great bargain).

He had done some business with a wealthy Mexican in one of the large towns, and had spent quite a lot of money in entertaining him, giving him dinners, taking him on automobile drives, and giving him a trip in a private railway car. The Mexican, who was extremely parsimonious, did not return any of these little attentions. On the day he was leaving, the American called at the Mexican's house, and there saw a fine collection of golden Aztec relics, which had been dug up in that part of the country. He expressed unbounded admiration for them. The Mexican immediately summoned his man-servant and said, "Juan, the American señor has honored me by admiring these things. Pack them up and send them to his hotel at once!" "No, no, señor!" exclaimed the Westerner, sweeping the curios into a bag which he carried, "don't put yourself to all that trouble. I'll take 'em along with me right now!"

Forthwith he said good-bye, and departed with the whole collection, leaving its late owner wild with rage.

NEW TOWN MADE TO ORDER.

Modern Suburb Will Arise on Ruislip Estate, Near London.

After a competition among sixty-two architects, many of them of international distinction, plans have been chosen for the great ready-made town on the outskirts of London, England, which is to be created on the Ruislip estate of King's College, Cambridge. The place is eighteen minutes by fast trains from the West End. The estates of the college extend to some 1,300 acres in the two Middlesex parishes of Northwood and Ruislip. An "aerated suburb" is what the papers call it.

The Ruislip town-planning experiment will be the most extensive undertaking of the kind in the world. There are to be more than 7,600 houses, divided according to rental as follows:

$500 or more rent.....	21
Not exceeding $500 rent.....	524
Not exceeding $300 rent.....	3,541
Not exceeding $150 rent.....	3,556

Total.....7,642

About 337 acres will be devoted to building plots, 225 acres to parks and other open spaces, and 184 acres to roads. Nowhere on the estate are there to be more than ten houses on an acre. This is the same rule as is usually followed in suburban development in America. In some places in Ruislip there will be only two or three dwellings per acre.

The central avenue of the Garden-town is to have a fifty-foot grass strip along its centre, flanked on either side by thirty-foot roadway; a church will face each end of the avenue. There are to be, of course, a theatre, a club, a municipal building, schools, an arcade, a concert hall, a library, a monument, a golf course, a hospital, an abattoir, baths, a laundry, a garage, possibly an aviation ground, and every other up-to-date-suburban facility.

The Ruislip Manor Garden Suburb is the first great scheme under the new Act of Parliament. The

It is actually put to bed every night, when it is carried in solemn procession by the priests to the treasury in the court. In the treasury are kept the swords and battle-axes, knives, spears and shields of the Sikhs, who are an eminently warlike race.

The floor before the Granth Sahib is strewn with roses, jasmine, and marigold petals, silver and copper coins. The priests hasten to divide the silver from the copper (like the sheep from the goats) and arrange them in piles to be divided afterward for the expenses of the upkeep of the temple and the maintenance of the priests. Standing above in the gallery and looking down we see the scene going on in the priests waiting for the offerings, some chanting monotonously, the energetic thumping of the drum, the pious demeanor of the worshippers.

A woman richly dressed in a silk chudder of some brilliant color comes to the door, bows and puts a little dust on her forehead, and then advances with her offerings contained in a brass tray, rose leaves, jasmine petals, attar and pan; hidden among the rose leaves are some silver coins. Next maybe it is a poor woman who comes in with an offering of a few grains of rice or corn, some flower petals and a copper coin worth perhaps a farthing, or at most a half-penny.

The priests take all the offerings and place them for a moment before the Granth Sahib, then sweep the coins into either the silver or copper heap and fling the flower petals aside.

DANGER OF DUST.

Chicago Health Bureau Points to Peril of Germ Laden Air.

"Consumption is due to consumption germs," says a recent Chicago health department bulletin. "These are carried short distances through the air from those that have the disease to those who are to catch it. So, first, the air must be clean of consumption germs.

Air to be wholesome must be free from dust. The most harmful dusts are the so-called carbonaceous, nearly all the dusts and stove products, most of the dusts and cinders, and the dusts from the lungs of those who can afford to neglect dust. Keep away from dusty places.

Air can be fouled by consumption germs as well as by dust. Offensive odors make the air unpleasant, but they do little harm other than causing people to shut their windows. The air we breathe out is nothing but the smoke from our bodies. It cannot be breathed back again without hurting us, any more than we can run smoke back into a fire and expect to get a good blaze.

Fouling of the air may be called consumption, pneumonia, grip or colds, but by one name or the other it is the same old fouling of the air.

"During the last few months the laboratory investigated, conditions of ventilation in the 5 and 10 cent theatres. Fifty-five tests were made. Twenty-one proprietors were notified to install adequate means of ventilation. In many cases no adequate means of ventilation was found."

be vanadium. The influence of the addition of small proportions of vanadium to steel is two-fold; it acts as a scavenger, removing oxides, nitrides, &c., in a form easily carried away to the slag, and it also toughens the steel directly, by its solid solution, under normal conditions, in the carbonless portion, known as ferrite. In addition it forms complex carbides of such a nature as greatly to strengthen the steel statically.

The result is a product so vastly superior to the ordinary carbon steel as to render it practically of construction, especially for situations in which shocks must be met and resisted. The combination of high strength and great toughness makes it the material above all others for automobile parts as well as for railway axles and engine frames, for springs for the important parts of vessels and for bridges and for similar structures.

For the latest types of engineering work, such as flying machines, submarines, torpedoes and similar work the possession of a material of high resistance to stresses of all kinds enables some of the most difficult elements of the work to be solved.

While the application of vanadium to steel constitutes at present its most important use, it has also a marked influence upon cast iron and upon copper, and while its use has not yet been developed so far in these directions, there is every reason to believe that these applications will follow.

GREATEST BEER DRINKERS.

According to Statistics Recently Issued.

The Strassburg Post of Berlin, Germany, has recently devoted space to a comparative statistical study of thirst, as shown by the amount of liquor consumed by the inhabitants of various European States. The task is complicated by the varieties of liquid refreshment which are met with in different countries, and which are common to few. It appears, however, that the Dane drinks on an average 104 litres of beer, very little wine; but 24 litres of brandy each year. The Swede is satisfied with 56 litres of beer and 9 of alcohol. The Norwegianian is one of the most temperate of northern nations, consuming but 31 litres of beer and 3 of brandy per head of population.

The Russian takes 5 litres each of beer and vodka, whereas his ally, the Frenchman, needs 32 litres of beer, 10 of brandy, and 108 of wine. John Bull imbibes 8 litres of whiskey or gin, 2 of claret, and 152 of beer or stout. The Dutchman rests content with 38 litres of beer and 8 1-2 of brandy. His neighbor, the Belgian, is more capacious, being satisfied only with 221 litres of beer and 9 of alcohol. The Austrian and the Hungarian each absorb 11 1-2 litres of schnaps and 10 of wine, the former needing in addition 80 litres of beer, while 11 will suffice for the latter. Of all the inhabitants of Europe the Italian is the one who drinks least beer, a mere 2 litres, and the least alcohol, 1 1-4 litres; he imbibes 98 litres of wine, however.

The figures for Germany are not given.

and certain departmental stores make desperate endeavors to copy the go-ahead style of the twentieth-century Yankee.

Plastered over the windows are such appeals as "Ojo, gran garata, ojo" (Look at the great bargains; just look at them); "Precios muy reducidos" (Prices greatly reduced); "Gran reduccion" (Great reduction). One worthy shopkeeper, with a limited knowledge of English, announced "Goods at the cut price," evidently a Mexican variation of the popular American expression, "Goods at cut prices." Some shops, in a desperate attempt to Anglicise themselves and appear very up to date have christened themselves "Fashionable," "Old England," "High Life" (pronounced "high leaf"), "Five o'clock," "Royal Club."

In one restaurant an attempt has been made to "English" the bill of fare, with such lamentable results as "beef-steati vieté" (for sirloin steak) and "coctee" (cocktail). In another, the proprietor essayed the experiment of translating the names of the various modern breakfast foods into his native language, and shredded wheat biscuit became "biscochos de avena." The translated terms were not exactly a success. Mr. Carson ordered some "biscochos de avena," and the waitress brought an omelette!

Every shop has a name painted over the door, and sometimes these are very quaint. Thus one drug store calls itself the "Gate to Heaven," and a drinking saloon is "The Lair of the Devil." The streets, too, bear picturesque names as "The Love of God Street," "If You Can Street," "Lost Child Street," "Sad Indian Street," and "Street of the Wood Owls."

Yet, with all their faults, the Mexicans are nothing if not polite—too polite sometimes, as Mr. Carson shows.

TAKEN AT THEIR WORD.

Mexicans of the upper class have a pretty way of telling you that their house is yours—"Su casa es numero," meaning literally, "Your house is No. —," giving their address. Of course, this is a mere manner of speaking, and must not be regarded as a serious invitation.

A story is told of a "Wild Western" American who, visiting the capital, was casually introduced in the street to a Mexican senor, who extended to him the formal invitation. Later in the day, when the Mexican returned to his home, he was amazed to find the American seated in his drawing-room in his best chair, his feet perched on another, his portmanteau at his side, puffing a big cigar, and at being greeted with a boisterous "Well, colonel, I've come!"

If you express admiration of any article in a house, the polite Mexican will take it up and say, "It is at your disposal, senor," and insist on your accepting it. You are, of course, supposed to refuse, firmly, and politely, saying, "No, no senor, many thanks, but it could not possibly be in better hands." I was told of a Western mining man, however, who took a mean advantage of this venerable custom.

MAKING DIAMONDS.

Specimens Manufactured at One-Fifth Cost of Real Stones.

After nine years of experiment a young Englishman has succeeded in producing what he calls "Synthetic diamonds," of a quality he claims never before approached. Their hardness is 98 per cent. of that of the natural diamonds. They can be stamped upon with the heel without injury. A London Daily Mirror Scientific representative has heated one in a spirit-lamp flame and kept it red hot for three minutes without damaging it.

The color is so good that even by daylight an expert can scarcely detect the difference between these stones and natural diamonds. And though the smaller ones are slightly better than the larger, they can be made satisfactorily up to a weight of one carat (four grains).

Two months ago the inventor had succeeded in turning out stones which defied detection at night by the ordinary untrained eye. His latest stones are still better. Their density is practically the same as that of natural diamonds, and they are absolutely permanent—unaffected by the atmosphere.

But they are deficient in that distinctive steely-blue shimmer which the best natural diamonds possess. Of course, the maker does not disclose his process. The base is presumably mineral, and the stones are made by compression, simulating the formation of natural diamonds through the contraction of cooling mineral matter.

Diamond makers, by dissolving sugar in iron, or some other substance which exerts tremendous pressure upon its contraction by cooling, have often obtained very small but perfect stones of more or less effective appearance. But this newest inventor has produced stones of remarkable size and brilliancy. He estimates the cost at about one-fifth that of the natural stones, at present prices.

A WOMAN'S WAR RECORD.

The death has occurred in the National Asylum at Le Vesinet, France, of Mme. le Breton, who until quite recently, was a canteen woman in the French army. She followed the colors in the wars of the Crimea and Mexico, and in the war with Prussia in 1870 she was wounded and taken captive. Although approaching her eightieth year, she went out to Morocco with the expeditionary force a year or so ago, and was once more wounded, and captured by the enemy.

LIVING IN CAIRO, EGYPT

MODERN CONVENIENCES, BUT THEY COME HIGH.

An Englishwoman Writes of Her Experiences in Housekeeping in That Country.

"When I first went to Egypt to live, about twenty years ago, residence in Cairo was very different from what it is now," writes an Englishwoman in the Queen. "Houses were inconvenient, had neither pantries nor bathrooms, and servants had no English training at all in the way of orderly housekeeping.

"Of course there were always the one or two exceptional servants to be had and occasionally a decent house or two to be found, but these things both cost a mint of money and were not available to the young official. The English community was small, perhaps 300 or 400 souls at the outside, and their residences were scattered over a wide area of many miles.

"Mrs. Jones had called; but where did she live? Right away on the other side of the city, down the riverside road, under a gateway, through a cotton repository, and then into a one-storied flat bungalow surrounded by gardens. And Mrs. Smith, where did she live? Out on the desert, two miles from nowhere in a corner of the old soldiers' barracks; no address, no road, no signposts.

"Still you had to find it, and in doing so you made great friends for your pains, and everybody absolutely knew everybody else. In winter things were quite gay, but funnily enough in summer

THEY WERE STILL GAYER.

All the unfortunates who were left behind to spend the heat in Cairo clubbed together, full of real friendliness and good will, to give each other a good time.

"I am afraid that sort of thing is quite done away with now. Cairo has grown too big, too prosperous, too busy to bother with the next door neighbor. The change seemed to come with the change of government. In the old days when the Sudan was a military fighting unit the pick of the English army spent its holidays from Halfa to Assouan with us in Cairo, coming and going throughout the year and made up of England's best form of sportsmen.

"In Cairo itself the present influx of hundreds of young educational officials had not yet come in to vogue. The club, not full to overflowing, was quite small, very cosy, very homely, very dear. The men had no wives and we few ladies had our drawing rooms always full with delightful bachelors.

"And now, twenty years later, what has happened? One's winter is spent in returning endless calls from unknown acquaintances sent from other acquaintances just passing through. You pass friends you would like to know only in the rush and tear of Savoy dinners or other hotel dances. You are out every night and in bed all day resting for the next bout.

CRANES HERD SHEEP.

Yakamik is the Name of the Only Known Shepherd Bird.

The yakamik of South America is, so far as is known, the only "shepherd bird" anywhere. We have all known of course, of dogs that, unaided, may be trusted to shepherd a flock of sheep, but a shepherd bird, which will drive its charges to pasture, protect them from prowling animals, and gather them carefully together at nightfall to bring them safely home again, is indeed a unique creature.

The native owners of sheep and poultry in Venezuela and British Guiana are the possessors of this species of crane—for to that family the yakamik belongs—are entrusted sheep, ducks and other poultry. The South American sees them depart for their feeding grounds, secure in the knowledge that the crane will bring them all back safely. Any unlucky animal detected by the yakamik while prowling about to steal gets very much the worst of it. The bird savagely attacks the marauder with wing and beak, forcing it to retreat in haste. A dog is no match at all for the yakamik.

At dusk the bird returns with its flock, never losing its way, no matter how far it may wander, for its sense of location is extremely acute. When it arrives home, the yakamik roosts upon a tree or shed near its charges, to be ready to resume its supervision of them when they are let out again in the morning.

This queer bird is said to be as affectionate as it is trustworthy. It will follow its master about with capers of delight, showing its appreciation of any attention given it by the most extraordinary evolutions.

LOST $500.

Lightning Against Steam and the Former Won.

Years ago when the electric telegraph was a new idea and a mystery to the masses, there came trouble one Saturday night in the Bank of England. The business of the day had closed, and the balance was not right. There was a deficit of just $500. It was not the money, but the error, that must be found. For the officials and clerks there could be no sleep until the mystery had been cleared up. All that night and all Sunday, a force of men were busy. The money was surely gone from the vaults, but no one could discover whence.

On the following morning a clerk suggested that the mistake might have occurred in packing, for the West Indies, some boxes of specie that had been sent to Southampton for shipment. His chief acted on the suggestion. Here was an opportunity to test the powers of the telegraph—lightning against steam, and steam with forty-eight hours the start. Very soon the telegraph asked a man in Southampton, "Has the ship Mercator sailed?"

The answer came back, "Just weighing anchor."

"Stop her in the Queen's name," flashed back the telegraph. "She is stopped," was returned.

"Have, on deck certain boxes (marks given), weigh them care fully, and let me know the result."

At the recent Honor Degree examination in Trinity College, Dublin, Miss Georgina Revington, elder daughter of John Revington, Tralee, obtained first place, Senior Moderatorship, and large gold medals in Natural Science, an unusually high answering. This is the highest distinction awarded by the university.

WEAR NO IMITATIONS.

Absurd Statements About Queens Mary and Alexandra.

Of the many absurd statements published about Royalty one of the most ridiculous is now going the round of London, and is to the effect that both Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra have exact replicas of their more valuable jewels made of imitation stones, which they wear on many occasions. It is added that it is a matter of the utmost difficulty to tell the real from the imitation jewels when they are placed side by side.

As a matter of fact there is not an atom of truth in the statement. Neither of the Queens possesses an imitation jewel of any kind. Nor is there any reason why she should. In each of the Royal palaces there are burglar and fireproof strong rooms fitted up for the reception of the Queen's jewelry, and only a very few of those about the court are even aware of the position of these rooms.

Queen Mary's safes can only be opened in her presence, and the keys to them never leave her. Queen Alexandra, on the other hand, entrusts the care of her jewels to the Hon. Charlotte Knollys, who alone possesses the key.

BRITISH PUBLIC PUT PRIDE IN THEIR POCKETS.

Flags at Coronation of Foreign Manufacture—Home Supplies Inadequate.

To the infinite disgust of the Teutophobes it has been found that England must go to Germany for its coronation decorations, and those English firms whose cry is "everything British made" are having a hard time swallowing their over-worked patriotism, writes a London correspondent.

The German manufacturers have been hard at work and union jacks, royal standards "made in Germany" by the thousands are to be sold in England, as well as many other novelties, such as plaques bearing the portrait of the King, and cardboard crowns covered with imitation jewels. Several English houses have refused to handle these goods, but no doubt they will swallow their pride when the prices are under cut by their competitors.

EXPENSES ARE HIGH.

"Rents are enormous, servants' wages are ruinous. You must have endless dresses for such a climate, and in April, when your money is all gone, you still have got to leave for Europe, else you spend the whole of next winter getting over the heat of a summer spent where you are. Everything has increased in price. The old houses are unfit for habitation and the new ones want $1,250 a year rent for five rooms. Then you can only stay there half the year. Added to this you must come and go with your family and you must keep alive somewhere during the other six months.

"You can at exorbitant wages throw out your servants when you leave, but it is better to pay them a reasonable rate and keep them through the summer. After all, they too have got to live, and their wives and children; also if you get a reputation for closing the house no servant living will take much interest in your welfare and will incessantly rook you during the winter months because he must.

"The cook's wage is high, but he has to pay rent, a family to keep and no summer work available. You must feed your English cook and pay her rent. It averages the same with the good one, and the bad ones we do not keep at all. Your black butler boy is your English parlormaid and in these days quite as haughty. He also stops at the silver and the door and will not touch the dustpan.

"There is little to choose in these days between the price of a good flat and service in Cairo and the same.

IN THE CENTRE OF LONDON.

You can get everything now sanitary, well-built flats, telephone, electric light and gas stoves, motor and electric trams just at the corner, but also you must have not less than $5,000 a year. In England if you are comfortable you can stay there all the year round, but in Cairo the more babies there are and the more the expenses increase, so much the more urgent it is that you must move out in summer and repeat all your bills, in another country more sanitary and with better climate.

"That is what makes Cairo so expensive for the poor man. I have seen humbled creatures with humbler wives arrive full of joy at a salary of $3,000 a year. With the best intentions, both pulling the load, living in summer on their people, with only one child and cheap servants, they could not make both ends meet. You cannot help yourself out of the trouble. You cannot go to market, you cannot visit your own kitchen full of Arabs, you cannot help being cheated.

"You must pay, or else you must do with cheap, bad servants who are stupid and inefficient. If a cook is clever at cooking he is clever at your accounts, and you may stand over him while he weighs the beef—he will still get his proportion. He has only six months in which to make enough to keep him going while you are away during the summer. Pay, and he will give you the best of good times—good dinners, no worries, no tempers, the house running on oiled wheels; but you must pay, remember that."

weighing anchor." "Stop her in the Queen's name," flashed back the telegraph. "She is stopped," was returned.

"Have on deck certain boxes (marks given), weigh them carefully, and let me know the result," telegraphed the chief.

This order was obeyed, and one box was found to be somewhere about one pound and ten ounces heavier than its mates—just the weight of the missing sovereigns. "All right. Let the ship go!" was the next order.

The West India house was debited with the $500, and the Bank of England was at pace again.

GERMS EXHALED BY BREATH.

Analysis Has Been Effected By The Ultra-Microscope.

The ultra-microscope has enabled Prof. Courtade of Paris, to analyze the human breath far more minutely than it has ever been done before. In a report to the Medical Society of Paris, he says that exhaled air contains not only gasses, such as nitrogen, carbonic acid, water, vapor, etc., but also a mass of tiny solid particles, some motionless others mobile.

The latter, he surmises, may include bacteria, both rod shaped and globular. The presence of minute bits of cell tissue (epithelium) in the human breath he regards as positively proved.

The process followed by the investigator in his experiments was very simple. It was only necessary, he says, to examine a glass plate on which exhaled breath had been allowed to evaporate. Under the ultra-microscope he observed collections of dust composed of as rich a variety of substances as that left by evaporated drinking water.

Dr. Courtade hopes ultimately to be able to lay down a new standard of health by a series of comparisons of what he calls the "breath dust" of healthy and unhealthy persons.

DEATH OGLES MIDDLE LIFE.

Startling Increase in Tale of Victims Past 40 Years of Age.

While the death rate of persons under 40 years of age has remarkably decreased since 1880, the death rate of persons over 40 years of age has markedly increased.

Why? One reason is that science has done comparatively little against the non-communicable diseases. Then medical science has nursed along weak constitutions which in earlier periods would have succumbed in infancy or adolescence, and has carried them across the boundary of middle age, but has not been able to assure them a ripe old age. A third reason, of course, is the increasing complexity of life, which brings heavier burdens and stresses and overwhelms some persons as soon as the impetus of their youthful vitality is spent. A fourth reason is that people do not replenish this vitality and prepare for the problems of middle life.

There is really nothing cheaper than the attainment and preservation of good health. Fresh air and sleep are nature's free gifts, and bodily activity a normal impulse of the blood, while it costs less to eat frugally than to over eat.

DYSPEPTICS CAN EAT BREAD.

Crust or Toasted Crumbs and Starch Cannot Ferment.

The conclusion that wheat bread is unfit for dyspeptics, sometimes jumped at because ill-effects are noticed to follow its use, is erroneous. On the contrary, it has been pointed out by Bouchard and others that farinaceous food is peculiarly adapted to some dyspeptic patients.

It is the microbes in the starch, which are capable of producing irritating acids, that cause the trouble. To avoid this, Bouchard recommends that only the crust or toasted crumbs of the bread be used by dyspeptics, particularly those whose stomachs are dilated. The reason of this is explained by the fact that baking temporarily, though not permanently, arrests the fermentation of dough.

When it is again heated by the warmth of the stomach, the fermentation is renewed. In cases where the bread is toasted brown through, the fermentation is stopped permanently.

RUSSIAN SOLVES PROBLEM.

Milk Can be Sterilized Without Changing Ferments.

A Russian chemist claims to have solved the problem successfully of sterilizing milk without altering its ferments and antitoxins. An ordinary boiling process or heating even to 62 degrees C. will make milk inert, while the Russian's method of bringing it so rapidly to a temperature of 80 degrees C. that the ferments are not altered is just as effective so far as the thoroughness of the sterilization is concerned. It is done in this manner: The milk is forced into the heated vessel in the form of a spray, which breaks it up into globules. It is at once condensed and drawn off into a receiver to cool. An air spray has no effect upon the character of the milk, but a steam spray of course dilutes it about 10 or 15 per cent.

MATRIMONIAL RECORD.

Couple Married, Divorced and Remarried Within a Year.

M. and Mme. Horgen, who live at Zurich, Switzerland, have just created a new kind of matrimonial record. They are each aged 19 years, but have been married, divorced, and a few days ago remarried at Zurich.

The young couple married at 13, and the wife became homesick and left her husband for her parents after a short time. They agreed to a divorce, and obtained it, but regretted the step later. A reconciliation took place, which has been followed by a second marriage and a second honeymoon within a year.

It may be explained that a decree nisi becomes absolute in Switzerland as soon as it is pronounced, and the parties are free to remarry next day. Further, if both parties agree, a divorce is a question of weeks, and very cheap in that country, a $25 note often covering full costs.

You may drive some men away from drink, but they will trot back of their own accord.

When King Edward was crowned every noble family went to Westminster Abbey in state carriages surrounded by flunkies in tinsel and flaming colors, but in the last ten years nearly all the family state carriages and other vehicles have been sold and the more modern motors have taken their places. These automobile owners are much worried whether they will have to buy, beg or steal carriages for next June's event.

The very widespread feeling that the coronation will not come off at the time officially fixed is shown by the record amount of insurance at Lloyd's against postponement or abandonment. In fact, so large is the amount of business offering at Lloyd's that further insurance has been refused. The clients are mostly hotel-keepers, house owners and stand proprietors along the line of who would suffer serious financial loss in the event of either constituency.

The underwriters have serious recollections of the very heavy losses entailed by the postponement of Edward's coronation, therefore they all say they don't want any more coronation business. The market is thus restricted to a few bolder spirits who began by quoting a rate of ten pounds per cent. to pay the total loss in the event of postponement of abandonment. They soon advanced the rate to twenty pounds and then to thirty pounds. Nervous people still flock to Lloyd's offering insurance and it is probable that within the next fortnight the rate will reach the abnormal figure of fifty pounds per cent.

This only goes to show how the commercial world of London reflects the pretty general opinion that may may but does not always dispose.

FEWER PAUPERS IN LONDON

Old Age Pensioners Said to Explain Decrease Last Year.

There were 11,985 fewer paupers in London, England, on January 1 than on the corresponding day of 1910. The official return in which the figures are given attributes the decrease mainly to the removal of the pauper disqualification for old age pensions, but it is due also to a certain measure to the already existing pensions and to the improved economic conditions, which have been telling on the pauper statistics for some months. Thus on December 31, 1910, there were 1,436 fewer paupers in London than on the corresponding day of 1909. Those receiving outdoor relief have benefited to a greater extent than the inmates of institutions by the grant of old-age pensions.

The Treat of the Season.

The fifth annual concert of the Ladies Musical Club, was given in the Brisco Opera House, on Monday evening last. This is the musical event par excellence that is looked forward to each year by music lovers of the town. Some very superior programmes have been rendered on former occasions by the best talent that could be procured, and while the cultured circle went into raptures over the various numbers the great majority of the audience applauded because it was the proper thing to do, but at the same time felt a little disappointed and regretted that their musical education had been so far neglected that they could not listen ear to ear with their more gifted neighbor. To provide a program of first class music that would appeal to a popular audience, was the task the management set out to attain and that they succeeded beyond their most sanguine expectations, was clearly manifested by the round after round of applause from the bumper house that greeted The Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir. It is difficult to single out any particular number, but perhaps the prison scene from Il Trovatore called forth more compliments than any other. The singers in their quaint native costumes captured the audience by the very first number and held them almost spell bound until the final drop of the curtain. Although each number was encores, and good naturedly responded to, every one thought the evening all too short. The Napanee Orchestra came in for their share of praise for several well rendered selections before the concert began and between the first and second parts. The Musical Club may well congratulate themselves upon the complete success of the entertainment.

CAPT. JAMES COLLIER.

The death Friday morning last of Captain James Collier removes one of the veteran mariners of Lake Ontario, Bay of Quinte and river navigation. He had been more than a half century in the shipbuilding and marine business.

Capt. Collier had been sick for about a year. On Aug. 9 last year he was forced to quit his post on steamer Reindeer, his own boat.

Since, he has gradually failed in health. The end which came shortly after eight o'clock, Friday morning had been expected by his family who were at his bedside. Death was due to acute gastritis.

From early youth Capt. Collier had been identified with the marine business. He began boat building when a boy. Then he started sailing and went on a number of vessels. Ultimately he left the sailing craft for the steam boats.

He built and sailed the steambarge, Bella Wilson, on the Bay of Quinte.

He was on the Str. Quinte, at the time, as a relieving officer, on the fateful day when the well known boat burned to the waters' edge.

HOTELS IN PORTUGAL.

Paying One's Bill There Becomes a Duel in Politeness.

When traveling for the first time in Portugal one is apt to become exasperated when he desires to settle up with his landlord at the hotel. When the traveler asks how much his bill is the landlord bows graciously, smiles suavely, rubs his hands together and replies that the bill is as much as the guest wishes to contribute.

This is simply the opening of a duel of politeness, for the hardened traveler at once thanks the landlord for his confidence in him and again very courteously asks for a detailed statement of his account. Still the bill is not forthcoming, for the landlord declares that he does not wish to insult his guest in any such manner. Finally the landlord does reckon up the charges on his fingers. When he has finished he asks the traveler how much the sum total is. If the traveler hasn't kept track of it the landlord very laboriously goes over the account again. If the guest has footed up the bill the landlord is sure that it cannot be so much and insists on a re-reckoning. The result is the same, and the landlord invariably needs to bring two or three more fingers into use for items that had been accidentally omitted.

Needless to state, the traveler not hardened to this process breathes a deep sigh of relief when he "escapes."—Boys' World.

Dogs' Public Baths.

Half the Vienna dogs are terriers. The fox terrier is a particular favorite. The necessity of the dogs being frequently washed has led to the establishment in Vienna of "dogs' public baths," which are to be seen in all parts of the city. One would think that the dogs being so popular in Vienna they would be everywhere tolerated, but such is not the case. "Dogs not admitted" is the rule at every restaurant and cafe, while the trams and omnibuses are also forbidden ground, and in the parks and squares dogs must be led.

The Empress Elizabeth was a great lover of dogs, and had a fine collection of St. Bernards and greyhounds, but the Empress of Austria does not resemble her in that respect, and consequently dogs are banished entirely from the imperial gardens.—London Globe.

A Young Flatterer.

Alpha, aged six, had been cautioned by his mamma after an appalling break of his in inquiring the age of a lady with whom it was an uncertain and delicate matter, never to allude to anybody's age or if the age of a person was mentioned casually to let the person believe that that person looked younger. Occasion came within a few days for Alpha to put these Chesterfieldian instructions into use. An old gentleman visiting the family remarked, with the natural pride octogenarians sometimes show in their distance beyond the conventional threescore and ten, that he was eighty-seven. "I am sure, Mr. White," said the dutiful child, "that you don't look more than eighty-six."

Gossip and Scandal.

Many people confuse gossip with scandal, but the two things are quite different. The scandalmonger is usually detested, while the gossip is often universally popular. In fact, the popularity which it brings in its train is one of the strongest incentives to gossip. A really accomplished gossip is a social acquisition. Thousands of people who do not gossip themselves like to listen to it. It saves them the trouble of talking. The gossip is generally good natured. The scandal-monger seldom is. After all, what is

HAS NO SUBSTITUTE

HER HOMEMADE HAT.

It Brought a Proposal That She Promptly Turned Down.

The bohemians were making merry in the dim lit studio discussing the latest novel that one of their number was trying to write, the brutal editor who had refused the best article ever written—a masterpiece of the host—be-moaning the nonintelligence of the art critics, execrating the mercenary theatrical manager and utterly repudiating the general public—the vast horde of the Philistines. By way of diversion the painter of pastel portraits said to the bachelor maid:

"That's a charming hat you have on. Who else would know enough to combine turquoise and old rose? You have a genius for color. What a pity you only write!"

"Glad you like my hat, anyway. I made it myself. I trust it will only enhance its merit in your eyes to know that it cost me but 50 cents."

"Impossible!" screamed all the bohemians with one breath, ceasing their arguments in order to take notice of the vastly becoming creation which capped the bachelor maid's brown hair.

"Fifty cents, did you say?" asked the man who once wrote a poem—aye, and had it published. Then rising, placing his hand above his heart, bowing low and solemnly, he said: "Fair one, will you be my wife? All my life I have been looking for a woman who could trim her own hats for nothing. Pray be mine."

"Nixie!" scoffed the bachelor maid cruelly. "All my life I have been looking for a man who would be willing and able to pay $50 for my hats."—New York Press.

She Makes a Suggestion.

"How beautiful and clean the horizon looks," said Polly as on the second day out she came upon deck and threw herself down in the steamer chair beside me.

"Well, it ought to be," said I, looking up from my book. "The captain has been sweeping it with his glass for the last six hours."

"That reminds me," said Polly turning two very great brown eyes upon me. "Did you remember to bring that vacuum cleaner along with you, as I suggested?"

on a number of vessels. Ultimately he left the sailing craft for the steam boats.

He built and sailed the steambarge, Bella Wilson, on the Bay of Quinte. He was on the Str. Quinte, at the time, as a relieving officer, on the fateful day when the well known boat burned to the waters' edge.

In the early days of the excursion business out of Toronto to Niagara, he captained the steamers Picton and Empress of India, then owned by the late James S. McCuig M. P.

For a few years he was on the Str. Armenia. Then he bought the Str. Reindeer which he had been running on the bay route for nearly ten years. Captain Collier was one of the best known captains running into Picton, and at all the ports of the Bay of Quinte his typical mariner's face will be missed by a great number of people.

During a residence of a quarter of a century in Picton with a few intervening years lived in Napanee, Capt. Collier always took an active interest in municipal politics. He was for three or four terms one of the town council. He was in the council the year electric lights were installed in Picton. When he lived in South Marysburgh he was at one time in South Marysburgh council for many terms.

Capt. Collier was born in South Marysburgh 74 years ago. He was an ardent Conservative. In religion he was a Methodist. He was twice married, his first wife being Elizabeth Farrington. His second wife, Eliza Clark, survives.

The surviving children are a son and daughter by the first marriage, Mr. Samuel Collier, Picton, and Mrs. O. B. Parks, Napanee and a son by the second marriage, Mr. Dorland Collier, Kingston. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon from the family residence on Main Street Picton.

"Will you give me a nickel if I do?"

"Er—yes. But you can't do it."

"You just look. See, I open the box, take out a cigar, and now it's a cigar lighter. Gimme the nickel."

The Way to Find Him.

"My wife and I are going to spend a few months with her people at Strong's Corners," said the meek little man, "and I want you to mail your paper to me."

"Yes," said the clerk. "What's your name?"

"Well—er—to make sure, I guess you'd better address it, 'Mary Strong's Husband, Strong's Corners.'"

Tactless.

"I don't think it was a bit nice for the rector to commend women's economy in dress," said the wife to her husband after the service.

"That shouldn't have annoyed you, my dear," was the reply. "You gown is plain enough."

"Exactly! His remark called everybody's attention to what I had on."

A Crazy Idea.

"Haven't you ever thought of going to work?" asked the farmer's wife of Sauntering Sam.

"Yes'm," replied the veteran tramp. "I thought of it once, but I was de-leeryus at de time."

Looking Backward.

"Boss, I can't live on $2 a week any longer."

"Stick it out for awhile," urged his thrifty employer. "Think of how you can brag about it when you've made your fortune, my lad."

well, it ought to be. And I, looking up from my book. "The captain has been sweeping it with his glass for the last six hours."

"That reminds me," said Polly turning two very great brown eyes upon me. "Did you remember to bring that vacuum cleaner along with you, as I suggested?"

"No," said I, wearily. "I remembered to forget it, however. What on earth does anybody want with a vacuum cleaner at sea?"

"It was only for you, dear," said Polly. "I thought you would like to have your brains massaged with it occasionally."

Life Insurance.

Primarily life insurance is a co-operative plan to meet the default involved in the premature death of productive lives. A non-productive life is not properly insurable. A life stamped with immorality is not insurable. A life somewhat impaired through defective family history or by individual weakness or disease, if that life at the same time is a productive life, is insurable at a price. All of which brings us back to the same conclusion—i.e., life insurance is a great social plan which merges the individual into the mass and puts behind the frailty of man standing alone the immeasurable strength of men standing together.

What He Means.

"So your old sweetheart is going to be married?"

"Yes."

"Who is the happy man?"

"There's lots of 'em."

"Why, she can marry but one."

"That's what I mean."

Could Be Useful.

"Mamma says that if you could make up your mind to go into papa's business, Arthur, he would very likely consent to our engagement."

"But, my darling girl, I'm a poet."

"That doesn't matter. You could write advertisement rhymes for our stuff."—Flegende Blatter.

His Talent.

"Is he a great artist?"

"No."

"But he gets good prices for his stuff."

"Yes. He's a great salesman."—Exchange.
